Sanction Bar Against Italy To Be Lifted By Ecuador

Rome Told Move Is Peace Gesture

Britain Is Reassured Addis Ababa Will Not Be Bombed.

By the United Press.

Rome, April 7.—Ecuador informed Italy today that she is dropping League of Nations economic and financial sanctions against the Fascist state. The date was not specified.

Italian officials attached great importance to the action since Ecuador is a member of the League Conciliation Committee of Thirteen, which meets at Geneva tomorrow to seek a solution of the Italo-Ethiopan war.

Ecuador's decision was contained in a formal note presented to the Italian diplomatic representative at Quito, Ecuador. It coincided with two other major developments in the Italo-Ethiopian crisis as follows:

1. Italy renewed assurances to Great Britain that she will refrain from bombardment of Addis Ababa and Diredawa.

2. Italian troops on the northern front of Ethiopia continued their relentless drive south toward Emperor Haile Selassie's imperial war headquarters at Dessye.

The Ecuadorean note said the government has decided to discontinue sanctions as result of Italy's acceptance of the League conciliation committee's offer to enter peace discussions and "because the business of the League of Nations is to contribute to peace."

Geneva, April 7 (AP).—Reports that breaches may be made in the League of Nation's sanctions wall around Italy stirred Geneva tonight on the eve of a session of the Committee of Thirteen to consider negotiations for peace in Africa.

The League announced it has no confirmation of a Rome report that Ecuador would break the ice by dropping sanctions.

The Ecuadorean delegate to the League said he had no official information on such a step, but added, "I have, however, received instructions to oppose any move to extend the present sanctions against Italy, including an oil sanction."

(Great Britain has turned over to the Committee of Thirteen evidence she contends is indisputable that Italy is using poison gas in Ethiopia, said a London dispatch.)

(Paris dispatches said Foreign Minister Flandin of France would press at Geneva for removal of sanctions from Italy or for the imposition of sanctions against Germany for violating the Locarno Treaty.)

Ethiopia Asks Assistance.

The Committee of Thirteen only has a mandate to try to bring about peace between Italy and Ethiopia and has no authority to discuss sanctions, which belongs to the Committee of Eighteen. Italy weeks ago accepted a peace plea from the committee, with reservations, and Ethiopia, without qualifications.

The situation was dramatized by an Ethiopian warning today that if the League fails to protect her, all small countries will lose faith in the League and its widely heralded "collective security."

Appealing for active assistance, the note said: "There is no doubt that had the states which are members of the League adhered to their resolves to stop the aggressor by applying effective sanctions, the war would quickly have come to an end.

"The Italian government, however, succeeded in sowing dissensions within the League, preventing the imposition of effective sanctions and securing the postponement of those it feared, especially an oil sanction."

Mrs. Charles Hamilton Sabin, who won national recognition as head of the Women's National Organization for Prohibition Reform, will be married to Dwight F. Davis, Secretary of War during the Coolidge Administration, former Governor of the Philippine Islands and World War hero, it was announced here last night.

The wedding will take place in May, but the date and the place have not yet been decided.

Widow of the president of the Guaranty Trust Co., of New York, Mrs. Sabin is the daughter of the late Paul Morton, Secretary of the Navy under President Theodore Roosevelt. She was born in Chicago in 1887.

Always interested in politics, Mrs. Sabin has served as president of the Women's National Republican Club in 1921, as delegate to the Republican National Convention in Cleveland in 1924 and as a member of the Republican National Committee. She resigned this post to head the prohibition reform group, which was disbanded in December, 1933, when repeal was an actuality.

She was appointed by President Coolidge as a member of the Lexington-Concord Sesquicentennial Commission in 1925.

11 Are Dead In Air Crash; Girl Heroine

By the Associated Press.

Uniontown, Pa., April 7.—A shaken air transport hostess, herself injured, telephoned from a farmhouse on a fog-enshrouded mountainside today the news that her airliner was a burned wreck, its two pilots dead and only two of 11 passengers alive.

The plane was the Transcontinental and Western air liner—Sun Racer. Ceiling was absolute zero on the highest summit of the Pennsylvania Alleghenies when it crashed into Chestnut Ridge, 7 miles from this city. It was on its way from New York to Pittsburgh.

The hostess-nurse, Miss Nellie H. Granger, gave first aid to the survivors before she stumbled to the farmhouse, there to report that only Mrs. Meyer C. Ellenstein, wife of the Mayor of Newark, N. J., and one man passenger, Charles G. Challinor, of Cleveland, were alive.

List of Victims.

The dead, identified by the company's passenger list, were:

Charles H. Smith, 1632 Victoria avenue, New Kensington, Pa.

D. V. August, 310 Bessemer avenue, Grove City, Pa.

Crawford Kelly, 219 Sixth avenue, McKeesport, Pa.

Arthur R. Evans, 256 Gross street, Pittsburgh.

Frank Hardiman, 25 St. Claire avenue, Rutherford, N. J.

G. B. D'Arcy, Park Central Hotel, New York City.

G. W. Hefferman, 2254 Grand Concourse, New York City.

Stanley J. Bayersdorfer, of Steubenville, Ohio.

Chief Pilot Otto Ferguson, Kansas City.

Co-pilot H. C. Lewis, Kansas City.

Four of the passengers were cadets at Valley Forge Military Academy—August, Evans, Smith and Kelly. They had started homeward for Easter vacations. Their mothers waited for them at the Allegheny County Airport near Pittsburgh.

Bodies Are Extricated.

Tonight rescue crews working in a driving snowstorm carried the bodies of 11 persons from the wreckage to an improvised morgue on western Pennsylvania's highest mountain peak.

The bodies were placed in the garage of a resort hotel there. Tomorrow they will be removed to Uniontown.

The Sun Racer was four hours overdue when Miss Granger staggered into the mountain home of Mrs. R. B. Addiss and begged to telephone. Already searching planes were aloft along the liner's route, notwithstanding dangerous flying conditions. C. A. Williams, TWA manager at Pittsburgh, said searching pilots reported ice forming on plane wings when they returned.

The crew of the Sun Racer had been aware of the flying difficulties. Chief Pilot Ferguson had reported by radio at 10:09 a. m. that he was flying by instruments and would not attempt to land at Pittsburgh. Then came the crash.

Airline officials said Miss Granger probably escaped because she rode in the rear of the plane.

Bruise Over One Eye.

Mrs. Addiss said the girl was tiny, brunet and not much more than 20. She had a bruise over one eye and was suffering from shock when she begged for the phone. She made her report hurriedly, did not pause to answer many questions and seemed in such a hurry to get back to her injured that Mrs. Addiss called Dale Weller, a neighbor boy, to drive her back in a car. Two of the hill-district neighbors accompanied her.

A call for physicians and ambulances was sent to Uniontown at once.

The wreckage was found nearly three hours after the crash by Harold Rankin, a mountain resident, after he found the hostess wandering about to seek help.

Miss Granger struggled through 200 yards of dense underbrush from the wrecked plane after the crash. She walked along a little used lumber road and then turned to take the mud trail. There she met Rankin.

Returned to Plane.

Rankin told of going back to the wreck with Miss Granger after she had telephoned the news to her company's offices. The trip through

First Day's Work Fatal as Man Falls

Anthony Robberti, 48, a stonecutter, went to work on the new Interstate Commerce Commission Building yesterday—his first job in months—and a few hours later he was dead.

Robberti, who lived at 135 C street northwest, was hired in the morning to work on stone figures. He leaned back on the scaffold, and fell 21 feet when a piece of stone which had broken loose struck him as it fell.

He landed, striking his head on a cement sidewalk. He died shortly after reaching Emergency Hospital. His body was taken to the Morgue, where it was identified by relatives.

South Faces Floods; Toll In Storm 427

16 Arrested as Looters; 23 Roads in 2 States Closed by Waters.

By the Associated Press.

Gainesville, Ga., April 7.—The storm-lashed South compiled a list of 427 known dead today from sporadic spring tornadoes as flooded rivers threatened new disaster over a widespread area.

Torrential rains swelled major streams even before the task of finding and identifying the dead left by tornadic thrusts had been completed.

The known fatalities from the latest storms which ripped through six States yesterday include Mississippi, 219; Georgia, 183; Tennessee, 12; Alabama, 11; Arkansas, 1, and South Carolina, 1.

Contributing the heaviest toll were this textile manufacturing center in the foothills of the Blue Ridge mountains, where 183 bodies have been found; and Tupelo, Miss., another cotton manufacturing center, where 203 died.

A composite estimate of property losses was placed at $25,000,000, with uncounted thousands homeless and thousands injured. Relief officials expressed belief many more bodies of the dead would be uncovered before all the wreckage is removed.

Bring Serious Threat.

The threatening floods, coming after the South's most disastrous winter and spring in a decade, brought a serious threat to numerous communities which escaped the storms.

Seventeen highways were closed by high water in North Carolina and six in South Carolina. Two railroad lines were inundated in the latter State.

Alabama's larger rivers were flooded, but little damage was indicated thus far. At Florence the Tennessee was failing in the vicinity of the Tennessee Valley Authority's operations, but upstream it was rising.

Weather officials said no concern was felt for Mississippi Valley levees. Thousands of lowland residents on the Tennessee side of the river, however, were routed from their homes and thousands more were ready to evacuate.

A crest of 26 feet, highest since 1929, was predicted for West Point, Ga., on the Chattahoochee River.

More than 1,000 relief workers labored in Gainesville and a like number was busy at Tupelo against the threat of pestilence in the wake of the death-dealing twisters.

2,500 Are Homeless.

At Gainesville 2,500 were homeless, upward of 1,000 homes were in ruins and more than 1,200 were injured. Four trainloads of the injured were hospitalized in Atlanta, 70 miles away.

While trucks moved slowly through debris-strewn streets carting off the wreckage, pathetic scenes were enacted at improvised morgues housing the dead. Steady streams of solemn-faced relatives moved through the establishments seeking missing kinsmen.

State health officers hurried to Gainesville, 200 miles from Cordele, south Georgia community hit by a tornado which killed more than 20 there last week.

Military orders ruled Gainesville, although Adjt. Gen. Lindley W. Camp said martial law had not been declared. Sixteen persons were under arrest accused of looting.

The two-story Cooper manufacturing Co., which caught fire after being wrecked, was the scene of the greatest loss of life in the north Georgia city.

Bodies of 45 women, burned beyond recognition, were removed from the ruins of the pants manufacturing plant.

More Feared Dead.

Searchers said more victims were certainly to be found in the building where 125 women employes reported for duty yesterday morning. Only three were known to have escaped.

Hearses, ambulances, trucks and wagons headed funeral processions at Tupelo, which buried its dead and mapped rehabilitation plans.

Borah Backers Lead G. O. P. Regulars in Wisconsin Race

Early Returns From Tenth of State Put Idahoan In the Front.

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, April 7.—Independent Wisconsin Republicans pledged to support Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, in the national convention, led the State executive committee's uninstructed slate in early returns tonight from the delegate election.

With about one-tenth of the State's 2,918 precincts reported in the delegate contests, the top man on the Borah slate, William J. Campbell, of Oshkosh, was 2,125 votes in front of State Senator Harry Griswold, of West Salem, leading vote getter on the uninstructed ticket.

The vote:

Republican delegates-at-large:

275 precincts: Campbell (B.), 9,955; Philip E. Nelson (B.), 9,792; Edward F. Hilker (B.), 8,909; Robert W. Monk (B.), 8,436; George Griswold (U.), 7,830; Charles S. Perry (U.), 7,713; George L. Gilkey (U.), 7,407; Michael G. Eberlein (U.), 7,057.

Roosevelt Ticket Leads.

On the Democratic ticket, which appeared to have attracted a greater number of voters, the State conference-endorsed slate pledged to President Roosevelt seemed headed for victory by outdistancing its few opponents. The President received 18,123 votes in 242 of the State's 2,918 precincts.

Daniel W. Hoan, aspiring to another four-year term to add to his 20-year administration as Socialist mayor of Milwaukee, was runnning a close race with Sheriff Joseph J. Shinners, nonpartisan candidate, in the early returns from the city election.

The vote in 85 of 397 precincts was: Hoan, 22,334; Shinners, 20,756.

"Business Sore" Says Filene.

By the Associated Press.

Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, said last night that opposition to the New Deal by organized business was a "fit of angry embarrassment" because President Roosevelt "did not follow their advice to the degree, say that President Hoover did."

In a radio address, praising the efforts of the Roosevelt Administration, Filene insisted that "this is no time for partisanship." He added:

Corporation's President Is Producers' Pool Manager.

By Sidney Olson.

Close scrutiny of Secretary Wallace's list of large benefit payments under the AAA yesterday developed the fact that a British-controlled Mississippi cotton plantation received in 1933 and 1934 a total of $177,947 for not growing cotton.

The president of the cotton-growing enterprise, the Delta & Pine Land Co., of Scott, Miss., is Oscar G. Johnston, manager of the cotton producers' pool for the AAA, and director and first vice president of the Commodity Credit Corporation, which lends to producers directly or through banks.

Johnston's salary with the cotton company is $42,000 a year. He is paid on a per diem basis by the AAA, and the extent of his salary there since June, 1933, when he was appointed, was not immediately available.

The Delta and Pine Land Co., controlled by the Fine Spinners and Doublers Association, of Manchester, England, received $34,200 from the AAA for 1933 reductions in acreage and crop control. This sum was received jointly, however, with the Farm Credit Administration, officials pointed out, in payment of approximately $50,000 in loans granted the company by regional agricultural credit corporations during the Hoover Administration.

In 1934 the company received $123,747 in approximate figures. The exact extent of its benefits is difficult to estimate, since the company took its returns partly in cash rentals and partly in cotton options, in the two-choice cotton system worked out under the old AAA. Under this the Government had purchased 2,250,000 bales of cotton from the old Federal Farm Board. The farmers were offered two plans—to take benefits from the rental of their land or to be paid in options on the Government cotton, figured at a base price of 6 cents per pound. As the price of cotton went up, the farmers stood to get the increase.

Chooses Smallest.

AAA officials said last night that had the company chosen to take its benefits entirely in cash rentals, it would have received about $37,000 more than its actual total.

The Delta and Pine Land Co., a heavy participant in the AAA program, is a 50,000-acre plantation, one of the Nation's largest, in the very rich delta soil of the Mississippi, famed for long staple cotton for fine cotton textiles.

Its fixed assets are $5,290,000 and current liabilities $2,600. Present assets total $276,000 and outstanding bonds are set at $5,000,000.

In the Secretary's letter to Sen. Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, in which he listed by amounts the beneficiaries of sums paid by the AAA, the name of Johnston was listed, while other recipients were not mentioned except by locality. This was done, officials explained, because the original June, 1933, announcement made known his connection with the AAA as an official.

Johnston, an official of wide influence by virtue of his Government position, cannot receive more than the statutory maximum of $25 per day for Government service on a per diem basis, which would give him, roughly figured, an annual wage of $7,500, about one-sixth of his returns from the British-controlled cotton-growing enterprise. His salary in 1934 there amounted to $27,000, with a $15,000 bonus.

Tenants Paid.

The AAA benefits paid the Delta and Pine Land Co. go in some measure to tenant farmers and share-croppers. AAA figures show that this averages about 18 per cent.

The 1935 benefit figures are not yet available, AAA chiefs said yesterday.

In the meantime, the Senate, convened as a court, is unable to pass on the resolution awaiting its attention which would require that Secretary Wallace make known the names of the benefit recipients. His position has been that such knowledge was being eagerly sought by persons who would use it for selfish ends.

Secretary Wallace yesterday in a

Smuggling Is Charged as Soldiers Are Ordered To Two Frontiers.

By the United Press.

Vienna, April 7.—Austria rushed troops to her German and Czechoslovakian frontiers today to halt smuggling of German arms into Austria, presumably for an armed Nazi putsch.

Simultaneously, Premier Benito Mussolini, of Italy, renewed his pledge of military assistance to Austria in event of a Nazi attack.

A large shipment of arms destined for Hungary, was seized by Austrian frontier guards at Linz last night.

Money also is being brought into Austria to finance renewed Nazi propaganda against the government, it was charged.

Authorities were not sure whether the bulk of the contraband arms were being smuggled directly from Germany or through Czechoslovakia. Therefore, they decided to take precautionary measures on both frontiers.

"Arms smuggling has grown to alarming proportions recently and has induced the Government to strengthen the frontier guards precautionarily," an official told the United Press.

This, he said, coincides with other perturbing events, notably the murder last week of two renegades from the Nazi party. They were

Spanish Cortes Ousts Zamora In Fiery Session

'Father of Republic' Loses Post 5 Years After He Deposed Alfonso.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, April 7. — Almost five years to the day after he drove former King Alfonso from Spain's throne, Niceto Alcala Zamora was ousted by a vote of the Cortes tonight from the Presidency of the republic he helped to create.

In a tense, five-hour session, the Parliament of Deputies voted, 238 to 5, that the President had not properly exercised his function in dissolving the last Parliament and that automatically under article 81 of the constitution he should be deprived of office. His term still had one year and eight months to run.

Most Rightists refrained from voting. It was a triumph for Leftists who won a smashing victory in the February 16 elections after Alcala Zamora had dissolved Parliament.

A committee formally notified the "father of the republic" of the Cortes' action, and Premier Azana announced that Diego Martinez Barrio, president of the Cortes and chief of the Republican Union, would serve as President. Martinez later was inducted into the office of interim President. There is no vice president.

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, Hungary, April 7.—What words failed to accomplish last Thursday in a heated committee meeting, a bloodless gun duel today between Premier Julius Goemboes and Tibor Eckhardt, leader of the peasant party, also failed to settle.

Today's meeting was in the best tradition of the long Hungarian dueling history—in which a number of previous premiers distinguished themselves—even to the climactic ending when shots of both went wild and the statesmen stalked angrily away, unreconciled.

Each fired a single shot at 25 paces while glaring at the other on the tanbark floor of the Francis Joseph Cavalry barracks, on the outskirts of the city.

Eckhardt had questioned the premier's ability in foreign policy last week. At this Goemboes, who is much heavier and taller than his younger appearing opponent, shouted at Eckhardt: "That is impertinence, arrogant impertinence!" Eckhardt then challenged.

Budapest residents applauded this diversion, revalling exploits of former Premier Tisza and other statesmen on the field of honor.

An official communique subsequently issued was matter of fact, declaring Eckhardt sought "knightly satisfaction" but did not mention the illegality of the duel or the possibility of an arrest. A small fine usually is imposed for violation of the anti-dueling law.

The two foes, accompanied by physicians and seconds, arrived at the barracks separately in automobiles. The duel master examined their weapons and announced, as a formality:

"I remind you, gentlemen, that dueling is against the Hungarian law, and I earnestly advise reconciliation."

The men shook hands and the duel master stepped off the 25 paces. They fired at each other on the count of three. Both bullets landed in walls.

Premier Goemboes' seconds were President of the Diet Sztraniavsky and Secretary of State Tahy, while Eckhardt was attended by former provincial governors, Szentivanyi and Mikszach.

Goemboes had received several challenges to duels during the past year but no meeting was held.

U. S. Chamber Sharply Assails Tax Proposals

Hearing Lasts Into Morning Hours; $34,500,000,000 Debt Is Predicted.

By Robert C. Albright.

A warning last night by the United States Chamber of Commerce that any new taxes must be coupled with drastic curtailment of Federal spending followed a forecast by Budget Bureau Director Daniel W. Bell that the fast-mounting public debt will strike $34,500,000,000 in the next three months.

A last word of protest against the Administration's $799,000,000 tax program was carried to the House Ways and Means Committee by Chamber of Commerce officials, as the final tax hearings continued until 12:30 o'clock this morning when the hearings were declared formally ended.

May Bar G. O. P. Help.

The committee will go into conference today on the first draft of a tax bill expected to embody the main principles of the President's original corporate tax proposals.

Possibility that Republican members may not be consulted was drawn from this statement last night by Chairman Robert L. Doughton:

"We tried to open the door here for a nonpartisan bill to balance the budget, but our Republican friends are so increasingly opposed to it that we will just have to write it ourselves."

Budget Bureau Faces Inquiry Over Gallinger

Senate Committee Will Ask on What Basis D. C. Requests Were Cut.

By Gerald G. Gross.

The Bureau of the Budget will be called upon this week to tell Congress why and how it is qualified to trim proposed appropriations for District institutions, The Post learned yesterday.

In a move which promises to bring to a sensational climax the Capital's civic campaign for adequate public health and hospital appropriations, Chairman Elmer Thomas of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations confirmed reports that officials of the Budget Bureau—which dislikes having its authority questioned—will be asked to come before the committee for questioning.

Gallinger Hospital, which has been widely condemned both in and out of Congress for its congestion of beds and shortage of personnel, proved to be the straw that broke the appropriations subcommittee's patience.

Almost Without Precedent.

Thoroughly satisfied that conditions there are almost intolerable, after recalling Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock and a volunteer social worker to the "witness stand" at yesterday's hearing on the District's 1937 supply bill, Senator Thomas said the Budget Bureau will be requested to explain what course it followed in reducing Gallinger's proposed appropriation from $706,000 to $679,000.

The Oklahoma sub-committee chairman, in commenting upon the surprise step, which is almost without a precedent as far as the District budget is concerned, emphasized that he will have no protest whatever if the Budget Bureau can show the Gallinger item was cut following proper consideration of the hospital's needs and its present condition.

The civic committee on public health, headed by Dr. Sterling Ruffin, president of the District Medical Society, last month received a hearing by the Budget Bureau at which it pleaded the urgent need of restoring health and hospital items previously eliminated by the bureau. To date there has been no action on the appeal.

Three Weeks Without Bath.

"All we want to know is how they pass upon estimates," said Thomas. "I'd like to see more money appropriated for that hospital and I'd like to know the qualifications of the employes who passed upon the figures submitted by the Commissioners and just how they went about cutting them down."

He reviewed evidence presented earlier in the hearings by Dr. Bocock and Mrs. Lester Buchanan, volunteer worker, and repeated by them yesterday, that patients sometimes go for three weeks without a bath and student nurses in their

Preliminary Television Tests To Begin in U. S. on June 29

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 7.—The Radio Corporation of America announced today that television preliminary tests in the United States have been set for Monday, June 29.

David Sarnoff, president of RCA, named the date at the annual meeting of stockholders in a statement in which he outlined the progress made in other lines of radio research and noted that "a difficult road" remained ahead in the television field.

The tests, which will comprise RCA's first step in taking television outside the laboratory, are to be in the form of field research from every possible standpoint, including transmission, reception and program presentation.

The plan for the tests was first announced at the 1935 annual meeting, when it was explained that from 12 to 15 months would be required for the move out of the laboratory.

Today Sarnoff said: "I am pleased to inform you that our construction work has proceeded on schedule with the building of a new television transmitter located on the Empire State Building in New York, and with an experimental television studio in the RCA Building as a part of the National Broadcasting Co.'s operations.

"Tests will start Monday, June 29. A number of experimental receivers are to be placed at observation points in the hands of our technical personnel so that we may determine the requirements and further develpment necessary to the establishment of a public television service.

"We have gone much beyond the standards fixed elsewhere for experimental equipment. But this is a far cry from the expectations of such a service aroused by pure speculation on the subject. There is a long and difficult road ahead for those who would pioneer in the development and establishment of a public television service."

How much time will be required for the field tests is something that no engineer will attempt to forecast in view of the many problems ahead. Some of these may be ironed out in short order. Others will require more time.

House, Senate WPA Inquiry Seen Blocked

Only Routine Questioning Expected; Hopkins to Appear Today.

By Felix Bruner.

Any real Congressional investigation into the administration of Federal relief appeared yesterday to have been effectively blocked. Indications pointed to only routine inquiries, with relief officials themselves as the only witnesses.

Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, will appear today before a sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee, which is taking up President Roosevelt's request for an additional appropriation of $1,500,000,000. The committee will meet in executive session.

The resolution introduced by Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, asking for a thorough relief investigation, was lying dormant in the Senate Audit and Control Committee. In any event, it carries an appropriation of only $5,000, hardly enough to start such an inquiry.

The Campaign Year Senate Committee to investigate campaign expenses, the members of which are yet to be appointed, has authority to study the use of relief money in politics. Extent of such an inquiry, if any, will depend upon the will of Democratic members of the committee, expected to be Administration stalwarts.

Holt Renews Charges.

The present hearings by the House sub-committee would be turned to some extent into an investigation, but the committee has no facilities or money to collect evidence. Neither has it the power to subpena witnesses.

The same is true of the Senate Appropriations Committee, which will take up the bill after it has been acted upon by the House.

Meanwhile, Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, in a radio broadcast last night, renewed his charges of irregularities in administration of relief, particularly in his State.

Daniel W. Bell, acting Budget Director, told the House Ways and Means Committee considering tax legislation that of $4,563,000,000 actually made available under last year's relief appropriation, $3,382,000,000 had been spent or obligated and $1,128,000,000 remains. Most of the latter sum has been allocated for specific purposes. The appropriation last year was for approximately $4,880,000,000 but, because unexpected balances turned over to the fund did not come up to estimates, the lesser amount was available.

Tydings' Absence Brings Delaly.

Delay by the Audit and Control Committee in reporting the Davis resolution was blamed on the absence from the city of Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, a member of the committee.

Davis said he had introduced the resolution after he was unable to obtain the names of persons given supervisory relief jobs in Pennsylvania.

"The people of the Nation will never be satisfied until there is a complete investigation," he said.

Senator Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, chairman of the committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments, which originally reported favorably on the Davis resolution, said there is a need for an investigation, but expressed doubt that there would be one. He pointed out that $5,000 would not be an adequate sum and that, if there was an investigation, it would be interrupted by the campaign and the facts would not be known until after the election.

"Failure to investigate would be taken as a confession that we are afraid of an inquiry," he said.

Danger that such an investigation would result in a political mud-slinging contest was pointed out in other quarters. Relief now is involved in party or factional fights in West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

No Plans Made, Says Glass.

Senator Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, of the Appropriations Committee, suggested that an investigation might be made within that committee. He has discussed the possibility with Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the committee. Glass later indicated that no plans for a complete inquiry had been formulated.

Minority Leader McNary, of Oregon, expressed the opinion that the resolution on election expenditures is sufficiently broad to permit a relief investigation of the kind contemplated by Davis, "but whether there is an investigation will depend upon the majority."

Incidentally, McNary, who must name the two Republican members of the elections committee, is having his troubles. Only members who are not candidates, and in whose States there are no Senatorial elections, are eligible. This leaves only seven Republicans on the eligible list, and most of them are friendly to the Administration in some degree.

Landon Strength Amazes Own Strategy Board, Which Counts 300 to 400 First Ballot Votes.

By Franklyn Waltman

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 7.—Although in a State other than the candidate's home, Kansas City is the real headquarters of the Landon For President campaign. But Kansas City is only 50 miles from Topeka, making it easy for Gov. Alf M. Landon's strategists and advisers to visit him, or for him to get them on the telephone at a minute's notice.

WALTMAN

As a matter of fact, the Landon boom was first launched in Kansas City by a group of newspapermen, including Henry Haskell, editor of the Kansas City Star; rotund Roy Roberts, managing editor of that newspaper, and Lacy Haynes, its political reporter. They constituted the first board of strategy and remain so today.

Mr. Roberts, former Washington correspondent for the Star, is as wise politically as he is in newspaper work. He is the chief Landon adviser. The Star, with a large circulation in Kansas and through the agrarian Southwest, is enthusiastically for Gov. Landon. But it was not always so. In 1932, although Republican in its sympathies, the newspaper supported Democratic Gov. Harry H. Woodring—now Assistant Secretary of War—for re-election against Mr. Landon.

The Landon boom grew so fast that months ago it became impossible for the Roberts-Haskell-Haynes trio to manage it alone. They set up headquarters here with Oscar Stauffer, a Kansas editor, in charge. Indeed, the Landon headquarters appears to be filled with Kansas newspapermen. These men at first made informal visits around the country in behalf of the Landon candidacy, but now they have become the hub of an organization that stretches into all sections, with the Kansas national committeeman, John Hamilton, field marshal-in-chief, with headquarters in Washington.

Mr. Hamilton checked into the Kansas City headquarters last week and sat down with the board of strategy to survey the situation—to count up the delegates which it appeared reasonably certain would be for Gov. Landon on the first ballot at Cleveland. When the result was computed, they whistled with amazement. They figured that Gov. Landon would have at least 300 delegates on the first ballot—probably 400, and it takes only 501 votes to nominate.

Only once has a candidate in a Republican national convention received 400 votes and failed to obtain the nomination. That was in 1912 in the fight between Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft. If Gov. Landon touches 400 votes on the first roll call at Cleveland, it is felt that there will be a stampede to the bandwagon on the second roll call which will nominate him.

The Cleveland convention is two months off and in politics anything may happen overnight. Gov. Landon still has some hurdles to clear—some high ones—and in the event of developments adverse to his candidacy some of his strength may evaporate as quickly as the dew under the morning sun. But his managers are cheered by the fact that "the breaks" so far have been in his direction.

William Randolph Hearst is a black cloud on the Landon horizon and some of the Kansan's advisers are wondering what can be done about it. Since Senate Democrats opened fire on the California publisher, the Landon camp has scented danger to their candidate in that connection. In extenuation of Mr. Hearst's ardent support of Gov. Landon, it is pointed out that the Kansan did not invite it—that Mr. Hearst sought him.

Of course, the Landon people did nothing to discourage the lavish publicity build-up which the Hearst publications gave the Governor when he needed it most. Candidates for office cannot be fastidious about their supporters, and they never are. Vice President John N. Garner and later President Roosevelt were glad to have Hearst support, as was Herbert Hoover four years previously.

Efforts to offset the Hearst support will be made—and are being made. For instance, in an editorial several days ago in his Emporia Gazette, William Allen White wrote in effect that Gov. Landon wears no man's collar—that "he owes no man anything for all his accumulated strength." More specifically he said that "William Randolph Hearst, the first hitchhiker on the Landon bandwagon, is tooting Landon's horn in California with red-faced enthusiasm," and he adds, "Landon owes Hearst nothing, has promised him nothing."

If the Hearst support has disadvantages, the opposition to Gov. Landon of Mr. Hoover is counted here as a distinct advantage—and it is being exploited by the Landon camp on the theory that whoever the former President opposes should be a favorite among Republicans. Incidentally, it creates a ludicrous political situation to have both Mr. Hoover and Senator Borah opposing the same man—especially when the Idahoan started out to eliminate the former President from any voice in party affairs.

Be that as it may, Mr. Hoover has no enthusiasm whatever for Gov. Landon and has been quietly telling his friends, according to report, that the Kansan is not big enough to be President; that the Hearst support is fatal; that Gov. Landon lacks aggressiveness. Some Hoover intimates have gone further by hinting at oil scandals, which seem to lack any foundation in fact.

Whether Mr. Hoover has decided to stop Gov. Landon at all costs is not known, although it is reported. But he is doing what he can to stir sentiment against the Kansan. The effect of this may be to drive into the Landon camp Republicans who dislike Mr. Hoover, and it may soften the opposition of Senator Borah to the Kansan. For instance, it was significant that Senator Borah reversed his opinion to enter the California primary when it appeared that he and Gov. Landon would split the liberal Republican vote between them—and that the Borah campaign manager in California subsequently announced he would support the Kansan.

The reason for Mr. Hoover's hostility to Gov. Landon is not the Hearst support, as suggested in some quarters, although the publisher's insistence on fighting it out in California brought this hostility to a head. It is contended here that Mr. Hoover first soured on Gov. Landon when the latter failed to defend the former's Administration and to seek to justify it.

Indeed, Gov. London publicly took the stand that the choice before the American people was not between the mistakes of the New Deal and a return to the old order and declared that "the hands of political destiny move forward, not backward."

Gov. Landon was not anxious to enter the contest for the California delegation. His friends both there and here were willing to have that delegation uninstructed, provided men friendly to the Kansan were given half the places. Then it was found that most of the candidates for delegates favored Mr. Hoover—and when the Hoover leaders refused to compromise, it was decided to file an all-Landon delegation—to which the Kansan neither assented nor demurred.

Ritter Partner Tells Senate Of Split Fees

Impeachment Trial Told Payment to Judge Was Debt Obligation.

By the Associated Press.

New testimony regarding cash payments to Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter, of Florida, split receivership fees, and only partial income tax reporting of such fees was received by the Senate yesterday in its impeachment trial of the Southern jurist.

The evidence came in further examination of the first of more than 50 witnesses, A. L. Rankin, West Palm Beach attorney and former law partner of the defendant. Late in the day, Frank P. Walsh, of defense counsel, started the cross-examination.

Under questioning by Representative Hobbs (Democrat), Alabama, of the prosecution staff of three, Rankin told of receiving $75,000 as a receivership fee allowed by Ritter. He testified to keeping $45,000 of total fees of $90,000 himself and dividing the remainder among other lawyers and the receiver.

He also described payment of $4,500 to Ritter in discharge of a law partnership dissolution debt, denying the $4,500 came out of the receivership fees.

Asked if Ritter had any advance knowledge of the agreement to divide the receivership fees, Rankin replied he could "not recall," although he said there was a stipulation regarding the division by the directors of the property.

Concedes Report.

Rankin conceded he had reported only $20,000 in 1931 for income tax purposes of the $45,000 he received as his share of fees in the receivership of the Whitehall Hotel at West Palm Beach.

He said he had made a "rough estimate" of his receipts in 1930, less portions of the fee shared with other attorneys—Walter S. Richardson, trustee in bankruptcy and later receiver for the property, who received $5,000; Shutts & Bowen, who represented some bondholders, who received $25,000, and Ernest Metcalf, counsel for the receiver, who was paid $10,000.

Rankin previously had been allowed $15,000 in the case by Federal Judge Ackerman at Tampa.

He said he made the $20,000 return with the intention of later filing an amended return, but before he could do so a bill was filed attacking Judge's Ritter's decision in the receivership.

"Casual" Discussion.

Asked if he had discussed the payment to Ritter with the judge, Rankin said he did so before Ritter left Palm Beach for Miami to go on the bench, but not after Ritter took over the post to which President Coolidge appointed him in February, 1929.

He said the discussion with Ritter was "casual," and the understanding was he was to pay the judge "as and when I could." He said Ritter knew he was "heavily in debt" at the time the partnership was dissolved.

To questions by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, as to why he insisted on Judge Ritter handling the receivership appointment and fees, Rankin said it was "because I did not want to have any publicity on it until the receivership appointment."

Party on Coast Split by Landon G. O. P. Charge

Young Republicans Attack His Failure to Join 'Harmony Move.'

By the Associated Press.

Sacramento, Calif., April 7.—The California Republican Assembly today charged Gov. Alf M. Landon with responsibility for "splitting" the party in this State by his failure to join a "harmony movement" for the May 5 Presidential primary.

The assembly comprising younger members of the party, made public a fruitless last-minute plea to the Kansas Governor not to permit use of his name on the California Presidential ballot.

This move was made in view of a decision by leaders of various other G. O. P. factions to sponsor an uninstructed delegation as advocated by former President Herbert Hoover.

Had Remained Silent.

The plea was dated March 26, the last day for filing in behalf of candidates. Landon, in line with previous policy, had remained silent on his attitude toward plans of various supporters to put his name on the ballot.

Since California law permits qualification of a candidate unless the person named repudiates the movement, the Kansas Governor's name went on the ballot, in opposition to the "harmony" group's uninstructed delegation.

William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, and Gov. Frank F. Merriam both came out in support of Landon before his name was qualified. The Young Republicans, many of whom had been inclined to favor Landon, finally reaffirmed their decision to stick by the uninstructed delegation.

Spotlight on Hearst.

The report was issued as a circular entitled "final report of special committee of California Republican assembly" under the name of Arthur B. Dunne, committee chairman.

An authorized summary of the assembly report stated the circular turned "the spotlight on the methods by which Hearst took over both the Merriam and Landon campaigns and set into motion machinery similar to that with which four years ago, through the California Democratic delegation, he left Garner for Roosevelt, and thereby made the New Deal possible."

Correspondence between the organization of younger Republicans and the Landon forces and others, previously held as "confidential," was diclosed.

A letter sent to Fred Seaton, Landon supporter, by Edward S. Shattuck, assembly president, said the organization felt "used, abused and disillusioned" as a result of its failure to prevail on the Kansan to join in the movement for "harmonious action" at the May 5 primaries.

"Party Shattered."

"So far as the Republican Party is concerned, I can assure you that it has been split and shattered. * * * The pity of it is that those of us who were sincerely impressed with the candidacy of Gov. Landon must now wage a bitter battle against those who are to fight us under his name."

March 28, the report says, Landon called Shattuck by phone and said he could not recede from his policy, which was not to "affirm or deny" any candidates for delegates put in the field in his name in any State. Shattuck said "Landon told me the door is absolutely closed to further negotiations" and that "repudiation now would be flying in the face of those who put Landon tickets in field."

In one of Shattuck's letters to Seaton, the president of the Younger Republican Organization wrote: "My fear is that he (Landon) will be swept down to defeat, not because he himself should be defeated, but because of his efforts to carry Mr. Hearst and Mr. Merriam on his back."

$50,000,000 Voted by Senate Group for Aid

Bank Committee Doubles House Bill to Provide Storm Zone Relief.

Additional Federal aid to flood and tornado stricken districts in Eastern and Southern States seemed assured yesterday when the Senate Banking and Currency Committee approved legislation to extend liberalized RFC and Federal Housing Administration loans to businesses and homeowners in the afflicted communities.

The committee favorably reported the Koppleman-Russell bill passed last week by the House, authorizing RFC loans for repair and rehabilitation of business and industrial structures, and for reconditioning water, gas, electric, sewer or other utility systems in flood or storm areas. The bill was amended, however, to make available $50,000,000 for loans, whereas the House bill provided for only $25,000,000.

Bill Eases Credit.

Attached as an amendment was the Walsh-Bulkley bill, introduced by Senators Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, and Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio, to encourage lending in the flood areas by easing regulations on insurance of loans under the housing act.

Under the housing act amendment, the restrictive measures put into effect April 1 by Congress, would be waived in flood and storm areas. Where loan insurance was cut to 10 per cent under the amended act, the new bill would return it to 20 per cent. In addition, accumulated insurance credit, held by private lending institutions would continue in the flood areas, although suspended otherwise by the recent act.

The amended bill also authorizes President Roosevelt to double the $100,000,000 limitation on insurance commitments by the Housing Administration.

The RFC loans could be extended for disasters occurring either in 1935 or 1936. The House bill, originally provided liberalized loans not only for those years, but for 1933, 1934 and 1937 as well.

To Aid Business.

The effect of the RFC liberalizing amendments will be to permit the corporation to direct loans to small businesses and industries. Heretofore, it has been necessary for the RFC to work through local nonprofit-making corporations before its loans could reach smaller businesses in stricken areas. Requirements for "adequate security" have been eased further by stipulating that loans need only be "so secured as to reasonably assure repayment thereof."

The committee, by amending the Russell-Koppleman bill passed by the House, obviated the necessity for returning the completed measure back to the House for reconsideration. When the Senate passes the bill it will be sent to conference, after which perfunctory agreement from both Houses is expected to be forthcoming.

Bombing Raid On Ethiopians Seen by Writer

Big Plane Rains Explosives on Caravan; Valley Is Scene of Attack.

By Edward J. Neil.

Gura, Eritrean Aviation Headquarters of the Northern Italian Army, April 7 (AP).—From the glass inclosed bombing pit of a huge trimotored plane in a screaming dive toward the earth I saw today the amazing destruction Italian aviation is inflicting on the demoralized remnants of Emperor Haile Selassie's imperial army.

I flew for 4½ hours with an Italian bombing squadron. We sailed over Lakes Tana and Ashangi, the city of Gondar, and the outskirts of Dessye and saw how deeply the Italians have really penetrated into Ethiopia, in addition to what they do when they find from the air columns of Ethiopians and animals huddled despairingly along the caravan trails.

We had been flying half an hour from Gura with Capt. Giovanni Dauria and Maj. Piero Ferretti at the dual control of an eight-ton Savoia low-winged bomber, holding two tons of explosives and a ton and a half of gasoline, through perfect skies over Aduwa and Aksum when the radio crackled.

Sergt. Gentile Cesare brought a message from the scouting plane: "Bomb a column of Ethiopian quadrupeds in the river bed of Addi Uaffet, near Aio."

Pink-cheeked Lieut. Francesco Possenisto, only 24, but the finest bomb shot in the whole army, slipped down into the glass pit in the undercarriage, and I went with him.

We flew down the side of Lake Ashangi. On we went, over Quoram, past the first army corps, encamped there. Three-fourths of the way to Dessye with two others of our squadron and three additional bombers following behind we found the Valley of Uaffet and Aio.

Suddenly in the brown valley, luxuriant with vegetation, we saw strung out groups of perhaps 500 Ethiopians in dirty shammas and about 2,000 mules, horses and camels.

The sound of the swooping planes made the huddled groups try to hide their bulky animals behind the protection of trees. Our plane wheeled, dove and thundered at them less than 600 feet from the ground, so close we could see the black men sawing desperately at the reins of their mules, while dun-colored camels stuck their long necks skyward, looking for the noise.

Then Francesco started pulling levers.

We dropped 24 50-pound bombs, several pairs of 51-pounders in clusters and I saw at least 10 strike squarely in the middle of frantic groups.

The explosions were so terrific and we were so near that the plane rocked and through the clouds of smoke shattered bodies were easily visible flying through the air.

New Floods Menace South

CCC workers were pressed into service as grave diggers.

While funeral services were being arranged as rapidly as facilities would permit at Gainesville, Mayor T. W. Palmour said separate services would be held for the unidentified victims there.

Surveying the wrecked Mississippi town, Adjt. Gen. John A. O'Keefe said it "looked like one of France's worst war-torn towns."

At both Tupelo and Gainesville food supplies and clothing were available in plenty. City, State and Federal agencies joined the Red Cross in manning and stocking emergency stations.

Ohio River Menacing.

Cincinnati, April 7 (AP).—High water carried a threat of heavy damage to cities near the mouth of the Ohio River at Cairo, Ill., tonight but promised to remain well below the high marks of the last two weeks in the upper valley.

Already 7 to 12 feet above flood stage from Evansville, Ind., to Cairo, the rived pushed to greater heights as water, loosed by heavy week-end rains, flowed in from tributaries.

Throughout the valley residents who evacuated their homes when the first flood struck delayed their return.

American Legion officials at Paducah, Ky., requested 200 tents from Fort Knox for use in setting up a "tent city" in a western suburb to shelter refugees.

At Dam 52, below Paducah, Meteorologist W. C. Devereaux reported the river at 50 feet, 13 feet above flood stage. He predicted a crest for Cairo, Ill., of around 54 feet, within 2.6 feet of the highest mark, recorded there in 1927.

WPA Men Aid Relief.

By the Associated Press.

Harry L. Hopkins yesterday authorized Works Progress Administrators in Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee and other storm-swept States to use relief workers on either public or private property "provided the existence of an emergency was certified to by local health authorities."

"Demolition of tottering buildings and the clearing away of debris in the streets," Hopkins said after checking over reports from his field staff, "are the principal work being done at this time."

With 600 relief workers already helping clear away damage at Gainesville, Ga., Hopkins said an additional 200 or 300 would go to work there immediately.

Marilyn Miller Dies at 38; Star Of Screen, Stage

Famous Singer and Dancer of 'Sally' Began Career at the Age of 5.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 7.—Marilyn Miller, vivacious blonde musical comedy star whom the late Flo Ziegfeld once called the greatest box-office attraction in the country, died in Doctors Hospital today after an illness of more than three weeks. She was in her thirty-eighth year.

Miss Miller, best known for her dancing and singing in "Sally," "Sunny" and "As Thousands Cheer," died as a result of an acute toxic condition that followed a long-standing sinus infection.

With her at the end were her third husband, Chester O'Brien, an actor, and two sisters, Mrs. Ruth Sweeney and Mrs. Claire Montgomery. Physicians said she was improving until Sunday night, when a high fever developed.

Married Jack Pickford.

Miss Miller, formerly the wife of the late Jack Pickford, brother of Mary Pickford, was born to the stage. Her parents were vaudeville performers and she joined the family song-and-dance team at the age of 5.

Although "Who's Who in the Theater" lists her birthplace as Findlay, Ohio, her secretary said tonight that Miss Miller was born at Evansville, Ind., in September, 1898.

With her parents and two older sisters, she made her theatrical debut at Lakeside Park, Dayton, Ohio. She was billed as "The Little Lump of Sugar," which accounted for the inappropriate nickname "Lumpy" that followed her through life.

Toured in Europe.

Finding it difficult to obtain bookings because of the laws that restricted theatrical employment of children in this country, the family went abroad and toured foreign countries for a decade.

Then one night in London Lee Shubert, the producer, saw Miss Miller dancing at the Lotus Club and immediately brought her to New York, where she appeared in the chorus of his "Passing Shows" of 1914, 1915, 1916 and 1917.

In 1920, at the age of 22, she attained stardom in "Sally," a Ziegfeld production.

After a three-year run, from 1920 to 1923, she broke with Ziegfeld over financial matters and went under the aegies of the late Charles Dillingham, who produced her greatest success—"Sunny." Co-starred with her in that show was the late Jack Donahue.

In 1927 she had a sentimental re-union with Ziegfeld and returned under his management in "Rosalie," and again, four years later, in "Smiles."

Her last starring show was "As Thousands Cheer," in which her third husband appeared as a chorus man. They were married October 1, 1934.

Prior to her marriage with Jack Pickford, which lasted from 1922 until 1927, Miss Miller was the wife of Frank Carter, who was killed in an automobile accident in 1920.

She was mourned by Shubert tonight as one "so fine and lovely" that her death "saddens all of the theater indescribably."

By the Associated Press.

After an exhaustive study of raw materials, Col. John A. Wagner, Quartermaster Corps procurement expert, has reported that the United States is now the only power industrially prepared for a big war.

"This is," he said, "the only country plentifully supplied with raw materials, together with facilities for their manufacture in vast quantities into items neded for war purposes.

"A study shows that we have, or can produce, during an extreme emergency, even with partial loss of seas, the entire list of strategic raw materials."

A chart prepared by Wagner based on the 24 raw materials considered essential and, in some instances, vital to prosecute a war showed that the United States has a relative self-sufficiency of 22.35 out of 24.

Ranked in order, by Wagner, the comparative self-sufficiency of the other powers is: Germany, 6.20; France, 5.37; Soviet Russia, 4.98; Great Britain, 4.50; Italy, 1.92, and Japan, 1.77.

In an analysis of the industrial preparedness of the great powers in the Quartermaster Review, the Army expert explained that the United States has been richly endowed with nearly everything it needs, or can—because of its favorable geographical position—readily import vitally needed materials, with little interference from an enemy nation.

Other powers, he said, are seriously handicapped by being dependent on colonial possessions, their lack of natural resources at home, and their vulnerability in wartime.

Listing the raw materials necessary to the United States in an emergency, Wagner urged that to achieve complete industrial preparedness, war stocks of manganese and chromium, two important raw materials in which this country is short, be built up in advance.

He also recommended that small war stocks of tin, iodine, nux vomica, opium and quinine be stored to meet demand until emergency substitute production is adequate.

42 Abandon Freighter

Tokyo, April 7 (AP).—The Scotland Maru, a 5,863-ton freighter carrying a 100,000-yen cargo of salt and no passengers, was abandoned today after going aground on sunken rocks 40 miles off the southern coast of Kyushu, large southern island of Japan. The crew of 42 took to lifeboats, and all were reported to have landed safely, despite heavy seas.

Maternity Hospitals Needed, Gassaway, Father of 14, Holds

Representative Percy L. Gassaway, of Oklahoma, father of 14 children, 7 of whom are living, told the Birth Control League at its luncheon session at the Women's City Club here yesterday that he is going to be elected Governor of his native State a few years hence on a platform promising maternity hospitals.

A staunch advocate of the birth-control legislation now pending before Congress, Gassaway appeared wearing his $37.50 cowboy boots inside his pants legs.

"It takes little courage for an old cow hand like me to stand up and say what I actually think about birth control," asserted Gassaway.

"But the mothers of this land are entitled to the information that will give them the right to self-preservation.

"If you have no consideration for the women who die in childbirth, and the children who die in childbirth, you simply have no love for your fellow man."

Political cowardice has accounted for the slow progress of the birth-control bill, Gassaway said.

Wagner Certain Housing Grant Will Be Passed

Expects President to Give Support to $876,000,000 Home Measure.

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, expressed confidence yesterday that his $876,000,000 low-cost housing bill would be enacted by this session of Congress. He added that he expected President Roosevelt will support his program.

"I am sure the President is in sympathy with the purpose of the legislation," he said.

The Senate Committee on Education and Labor will open hearings on the bill next week. Wagner will be the first witness.

Meanwhile, Secretary Ickes, who heads the present low-cost housing program, indicated that he may favor the legislation. Under the bill the program would be administered by a commission of five of which Ickes would be a member ex-officio.

The bill provides for loans and grants to States and municipalities, and authorizes the commission to issue bonds. The direct appropriation for the first year would be only $51,000,000, with the appropriations spread over four years.

Administration housing experts, however, still were not agreed upon the program. They are expected to meet with President Roosevelt late this week.

$15,000,000 Is Sought To Aid German Jewry

London, April 7 (AP).—An appeal for at least $15,000,000 to assist 100,000 German Jews to settle in Palestine and elsewhere was made today, on the first day of Passover, from every Jewish pulpit in the British empire.

Sir Herbert Samuel, who spoke in a West-end synagogue, said that America had promised to raise $10,000,000 of the total minimum fund required.

Budget Bureau

teens are compelled to care for 60 patients each during all-night periods.

"A municipal hospital should be run on a human, civilized basis," said Thomas. "In attempting to learn by what processes the Gallinger estimates were reduced, we are trying to arrive at something constructive. This is to be no 'quiz,' but something which should benefit citizens of the District."

Mrs. Buchanan Testifies.

From a reliable source it was learned that Senator Glass was most vehement yesterday in denouncing Budget Bureau tactics in trimming health and hospital estimates in the supply bill. The plain-spoken Virginian, who is chairman of the Appropriations Committee, has attended every sub-committee hearing at which the Health Department and municipal hospitals were discussed.

When the Senate sub-committee opened hearings on the 1937 supply bill last month, Dr. Bocock was among the departmental and institutional heads who testified on their respective needs. Subsequently, when the hearings were thrown open to civic leaders, Mrs. Buchanan talked about Gallinger, not from an administrative standpoint, but as an individual who visits the hospital once a week to minister to patients housed in overcrowded wards and even corridors and lacking in adequate nursing attention.

Cut by House Body.

The committee members—particularly Senators Glass, Copeland, Thomas, Capper and King—were so deeply touched by Mrs. Buchanan's account they brought her back yesterday to repeat her charges in the presence of Dr. Bocock.

The superintendent joined her in arguing that nurses are too few, funds should be appropriated for a social service department, laboratory personnel is inadequate, and acute congestion persists.

Dr. Bocock's 1937 budget, submitted to the commissioners, called for a total outlay of $780,000. The District heads reduced this to $706,000, thereby hoping to minimize further cuts when the item went to the Budget Bureau and, later, to Congress. The bureau, however, took an additional $27,000 cut. Then the House, at the instigation of the Blanton sub-committee on appropriations, reduced the estimate to $674,190.

All but $250 cut out of the Gallinger estimates by the Budget Bureau was directed against the addition of personnel. Forty-one added employes, as recommended by the Commissioners, were cut to 20. The 21 eliminations included eight graduate nurses, an assistant medical technician, a morgue attendant, five hospital attendants, one clerk-stenographer, a fireman and three minor domestic attendants.

The "new personnel" item shrank some more before being passed by the House, a social service worker (who would have formed the nucleus of a social service department) and a junior clerk being lopped off.

Plane Crash

He said one man sat on a tree stump, smoking a cigarette, his legs hanging grotesquely.

Rankin continued:

"This man said 'boy, I sure am glad to see you,' and insisted that I come up closer, even though Miss Granger said not to go too close to the plane.

"I told him 'help's on the way,' and he said:

"'Thank God.'"

The man apparently was Charles G. Challinor, of Cleveland, Ohio, credited by other rescuers with releasing Miss Granger from the wrecked plane.

Weller, who is a farmer-rescue-worker, said:

"That fellow's a hero, let me tell you.

Legs Are Broken.

"When the ship crashed he found himself on the ground. He heard Miss Granger yellin' from inside the ship and he tried to get up. He couldn't. You see, his legs are broken.

"So, he crawled along the ground through the brush, and got a-hold of a handle on the door and pulled it open, lettin' her out."

Miss Granger herself didn't want to talk much about the crash. She said:

"I've only got a minute.

"Well, after the man let me out of the ship, I fixed him and the lady up and then I started for help.

"I walked a ways and found a road. I felt all right for a while, but got sick and tired later on. Then I saw a farmhouse and I went in and asked to use the phone.

"I felt dizzy in the farmhouse and I guess I told them everybody but me was dead at first. Then I corrected myself. I told them where I was and they said they would send help.

"Now, please, I've got to get an ambulance."

Pilots Were Veterans.

The hostess-heroine had been in the employ of the air transport company only a few months. Her fellow crew members, the pilots, had seen years of service. Ferguson had been a TWA employe four years, a private pilot before that. Lewis was with the old National Air Transport Co. before he joined TWA, also four years ago.

Jack Frye, president of TWA, said at Newark the air veterans were following a new type of beam, but appeared to have been 50 miles off the course.

From Washington came word that the Department of Commerce had dispatched four inspectors with instructions to take all necessary steps to determine the cause of the crash. The department promised to publish a report within 30 days. The inspectors are R. D. Hazen, B. M. Jacobs, G. W. Lossow and O. D. Murphy.

A Pittsburgh pilot, Joseph Anthony, who flew over the scene of the wreck as the atmosphere grew clearer, said he could make out the debris.

"The ship must have hit with tremendous force. It was completely wrecked," he reported. He added, "I could see autos and ambulances 4 or 5 miles away from it. The cars couldn't get closer, but people were climbing toward the spot."

The liner struck the mountain 3 miles from the Summit Hotel, highest place in western Pennsylvania and not far from Fort Necessity, historic shrine of many Revolutionary and Indian battles. Near Fort Necessity is a State forest and the region around Summit Hotel is broken and densely wooded. Below lies typical western Pennsylvania hill country, dotted with soft coal mine structures and coke ovens.

Air Hostess, Horror-Stricken, Walks 4 Miles to Call for Aid

Woman Whose Telephone She Used Tells of Heroic Efforts.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Elliottsville, Pa., April 7.—Mrs. Ray Addis, whose telephone Stewardess Nellie H. Granger used to report the crash of a giant airliner near Uniontown, today told of Miss Granger's heroic efforts.

Her story follows:

"Never have I seen such a terror-stricken girl as Nellie Granger. Nor one who, in the face of such tragedy as she had just witnessed and experienced, bore up with such composure.

"Miss Granger burst into my home—I think it must have been about 2 o'clock this afternoon—and her eyes were wide with horror.

"'Please,' she cried, 'I must telephone Pittsburgh. There's been a terrible airplane crash!'"

"Without asking any questions, I showed her the telephone in the dining room. The poor child's hands were trembling and she almost shouted the number of the TWA Pittsburgh headquarters into the phone.

"It seemed ages before they made the connection. She told me while she waited that she was hostess on a passenger plane which had crashed and burst into flames about 4 miles north of my home.

"Betty, my 15-year-old daughter, was at school in Uniontown and Ray—that's my husband—was at work on that PWA road project down the highway a piece, so that I was alone.

"Miss Granger's voice steadied when she finally got through to the TWA. She asked for a Mr. Williams.

"Mr. Williams," she said, "this is Nellie Granger, hostess on flight one. We've had a horrible accident. The ship crashed and started to burn about two hours ago. Near Uniontown."

"The girl tightened her grip on the phone. She was beginning to look white around the eyes, except the rims, which were red from crying. A bump, the size of a small peach, over her right eye, seemed to throb. There were tear stains down her cheeks.

"'Both Otto Ferguson and Lewis were killed,' she went on. 'Nine passengers were killed. I dragged two out of the plane before the heat became so intense I had to give it up. I tried for several others, but I could see they were dead.'

"She didn't tell it just that way. Her sentences were broken up in spite of her effort to be calm. I just noticed then that the back of her uniform jacket was burned, her hands were black and a few wisps of her dark hair were burned.

"'I think,' she was saying when I left to look for Dale Weller, a neighbor—'I think the two are Mrs. Ellenstein and Mr. . . . it sounded like 'Wasser' to me . . . I left them lying in the grass quite a distance from the burning ship.'

"I don't know what Mr. Williams told her. She had hung up when I got back with Mr. Weller. She just sat back in a chair with that all-gone look. I could see she was desperately tired, so I put a kettle of water on the fire for some coffee.

"The girl stayed hardly more than 15 minutes, though it seemed like hours passed. She wouldn't take any coffee for herself, but asked for some to take to the two she left in the grass.

"It was snowing when she got here, but it stopped later.

"I got her two blankets and poured a quart of hot coffee into a vacuum bottle. Before I hardly knew it, she and Mr. Weller had left to go back to the crash. Oh, yes; she had to borrow an overcoat from Mr. Weller. She said her own was burned from her back.

"I didn't question her much because I could see she was near exhaustion. But between sighs she sandwiched in enough to paint a horrifying picture. I remember she said the inside of the plane was blood-spattered. It's been over three hours since they left here and I haven't heard another word from them. I'm almost frantic myself."

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

Mrs. Pearl K. Edler, superintendent of public welfare of Fairfax County, Va., announced yesterday that despite a small reduction made by the county board of supervisors in the welfare budget, the county will be able to qualify for its portion of State welfare funds during the next fiscal year.

Welfare funds to be received from the State will total $9,649.31, it has been announced, and together with the $11,880 appropriated by the board of supervisors, the local welfare department will have about $21,000 to provide for indigents after July 1.

Before the county could share in the State funds it was required that the county contribute $5,789.59 over and above the amount needed for institutional care, which includes hospitalization and its share of the expense of the district home. Aside from the fact that not more than 10 per cent of the money received from the State can be used for administrative purposes, the county welfare board will be able to use the money for poor relief as it deems best.

Mrs. Russell A. Lynn, of Herndon, who has been chairman of the county welfare board for many years, has resigned. It is expected that her successor will be named by Judge Walter T. McCarthy, of the Circuit Court, in the near future as, beginning next month, the welfare board will hold regular monthly meetings on the first Monday in each month.

Mayor E. T. Bennet and Town Clerk F. A. Wilcox, of Vienna, Va., have been authorized by the town council to execute a deed to the board of supervisors of Fairfax County for the town's share of the old railroad right of way from Vienna to Springfield. This right of way was inherited jointly by the town and Mrs. John W. Echols from the estate of Maj. Charles Delano Hines. The county has agreed to accept the old right of way for road purposes.

The council has authorized County Game Warden A. W. Mills to work within the corporate limits to check unlicensed dogs. Next week has been set aside by the council as spring clean-up week and the citizens have been instructed to have the trash ready for collection by the town truck.

Mrs. W. W. Louk requested the council to complete a stone wall aruond the school building. This wall was started last year by WPA labor, but was left incomplete. The council hesitated to authorize the work because of complaint received from the local base ball club that this wall interferes with the fielding of balls on its diamond.

It was announced that citizens who expect to become candidates for local offices at the June election must file their applications with County Clerk John M. Whalen. Such applications must be filed not later than tomorrow so the candidates may have their names printed on the ballots.

Mrs. C. A. Ransom has appointed Mrs. Atherton Mears, Mrs. Macon Ware and Mrs. Albert Lester a nominating committee for the Falls Church Parent-Teacher Association.

Mrs. D. J. Shear, Mrs. Albert Ware, Mrs. William Clayton Pryor and Mrs. Joseph McCaskill hae been named to represent the Falls Church P.-T. A. at the annual meeting of the northern Virginia district of the Co-operative Education Association, Virginia branch of the Natoinal Congress of Parents and Teachers, which will meet at 10 a. m. Thursday, April 16, in Trinity Methodist Church, Alexandria.

Mrs. Atheron Mears, chairman of room mothers, announces that group discussions will be held during April on motion pictures for school children.

Central Fiscal Authority Held Need of Montgomery County

Miss Lavinia Engle Cites Overlapping of Welfare Department and Board; Rezoning at Kensington Bridge Opposed.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
9213 Clark Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone, SHepherd 2363.

Lack of centralized authority establishing responsibility for the fiscal affairs of Montgomery County was hit by Miss Lavinia Engle, chairman of the county welfare board, at a meeting of the board at Rockville.

Miss Engel spoke at a discussion of the administration of relief funds to be raised by the tax bill passed at the recent special session of the State Legislature. County Commissioner Paul M. Coughlan, acting chairman of te board of county commissioners, previously had announced that the funds would be disbursed by the county department of public welfare.

The county department, according to Miss Engle, largely duplicates the work of the welfare board and the dual agencies constitute a continual complication in administering local relief. The welfare board operates under the Board of State Aid and Charities and disburses Federal funds. The department of public welfare is a newer agency, set up when the Fusion party assumed control last January, and handles State funds.

Opposition to commercial development of the section contiguous to the proposed Lincoln avenue overhead crossing at Kensington was voiced yesterday to the commissioners by the mayor and town council of Kensington and the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

William P. Dillon, jr., had applied for reclassification of his property from residential to commercial. The county commissioners wrote Dillon of the opposition and said they will not advertise a hearing on the change in zoning unless he insists.

The commissioners set May 11 for a hearing on an application by Walter L. Funderburk for a change in classification of property in Blair-Takoma from residential "A" to "C" to permit erection of an apartment house. The park and planning commission made no recommendation.

Indorsement of the commissioners' efforts to have a bridge at Whites Ferry to replace the Point of Rocks Bridge destroyed by the recent flood was received from the Rockville Chamber of Commerce and the Martinsburg, W. Va., Chamber of Commerce. Both bodies pledged support.

The commissioners ordered that all county employes be given a holiday Good Friday and Holy Saturday. Good Friday is a legal holiday in Maryland.

Dr. C. C. Galloway announced last night that he is not a candidate for mayor of Takoma Park and that he will support John R. Adams, who has been a member of the town council for 14 years.

"I was not consulted when my name was proposed," Dr. Galloway declared, "and I had no idea I was even under consideration until I returned home yesterday from a trip to South Carolina. The first intimation I had was when I read The Post in Richmond."

Robert Pier, of Potomac, Md., was fined $102.50 yesterday in Montgomery County Police Court on charges of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. He was arrested earlier in the morning after an automobile which he is alleged to have been driving ran from the Rockville Pike near Willow Inn. Earnest Pier, 468 L street northwest, was taken to Georgetown Hospital by the Rockville Rescue Squad and treated for a broken leg and severe lacerations on the forehead.

Robbers broke into the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad freight office at Boyds Station, Md., early yesterday and stole two cartons of drugs and a carton of tea. The staples on the door lock were pried open. Lieut. W. H. Axline, of the Baltimore & Ohio police, took the lock to Baltimore in an effort to locate fingerprints.

J. Somervell Dawson, jr., of Rockville, was elected president of the United Young Men's Democratic Clubs of Montgomery County at the annual meeting in the old courthouse at Rockville. Others elected were Jack Spates, Rockville, corresponding secretary; Ralph Berry, Chevy Chase, recording secretary; James T. Hoyle, Barnesville, treasurer; Albert Brault, Bethesda, parliamentarian, and Francis Day, Potomac, sergeant at arms. The presidents of the various affiliated clubs serve as vice presidents of the united groups.

It is up to the individuals in this country to create a friendly policy between the United States and Japan, according to Elton Atwater, assistant in the department of international relations graduate school of the American University, in an address yesterday before the Takoma Park Women's Club at the Takoma Park town hall.

The club voted to donate $25 to the Taoma Park branch of the American Red Cross. It also voted to give $25 to the National Symphony Orchestra. Mrs. L. V. Lampson was appointed chairman of the elections committee. The club will hold an entertainment April 28 at 8 p. m. at the town hall.

An appeal to the Montgomery county commissioners and the board of education to purchase the Hodges tract of land adjacent to the Takoma Park Elementary School, Philadelphia avenue, will be made by the Community League of Takoma Park, which met at the Takoma Park Library.

Judge H. C. Heffner, president, has appointed a special committee to confer with the commissioners and board, April 21. John Coffman is chairman of the committee, consisting of Mrs. Walter Lambert, Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, Mrs. Frank Harris and Heffner.

Dr. E. W. Broome, superintendent of Montgomery County public schools, will be the guest speaker at a meeting of the Woodside Park Civic Association today at 8 p. m. at Jesup Blair Community House, Silver Sprig, Md.

Services will be held at St. John's Church, Forest Glen, Md., tomorrow and Friday, at 8 p. m. On Saturday mass will begin at 7:30 a. m., and on Sunday there will be high mass at 8:30 and another mass at 10:30 a. m. Special Easter music wil be given by the choir.

An Easter service will be held in the auditorium of Poolesville High School tomorrow at 8 p. m. under auspices of the adult education class. Mrs. Laura Rogers, of Washington Grove, is director. The Rev. Guy Crook, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Ernest Harrison, pastor of the Poolesville Methodist Episcopal Church, will conduct the services. Special musical numbers will be sung by the Luhn brothers, Mrs. Adam Shannon, Mrs. G. Robert Gray and John E. Darby.

Lee Boulevard Rezoning Voted To Get U.S. Aid

County Commissioners Act to Meet Objections of Public Roads Unit.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Cla. 509. Clarendon, Va.

In an effort to speed up the completion of the Lee boulevard to the Arlington Memorial Bridge the county board yesterday morning, by resolution, advised the United States Bureau of Public Roads that it unanimously favors the rezoning of a strip of property fronting on the right of way of the boulevard approximately 1,400 feet from local business to residential "A."

This action was prompted by the receipt of a letter from Attorney Thomas W. Philips, representing the owners of the property recently zoned local business that it will immediately take steps to have it rezoned back to residential "A," to meet objections raised by the bureau.

The Bureau of Public Roads, following the original rezoning of the property by the county board, had notified the State highway department and the board that it would withhold Federal aid in the completion of the boulevard.

County Manager Roy S. Braden was instructed to present to the Bureau of Public Roads the letter received from counsel representing the property owners and also to ascertain their wishes as to further action necessary by the board to assure the releasing of Federal funds for the project.

Acting upon a request from Crandall Mackey, the board authorized Chairman George M. Yeatman and the county manager to represent it at a Senate committee hearing scheduled for this week in the interest of having Chain Bridge rebuilt.

Salary of Andrew Jenson, of Cherrydale, who was appointed on Monday as building inspector, was fixed at $2,400 a year.

Mrs. Laura T. Boldin was elected president of the Woman's Democratic Club of Arlington County at its annual meeting held last night at Clarendon.

Other officers elected were Mrs. J. E. English, first vice president; Mrs. Crandall E. Mackey, second vice president; Mrs. William Friess, treasurer; Mrs. M. Blue, recording secretary; Mrs. Walter Gould, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder, parliamentarian and Mrs. Catherine M. Rogers, historian.

Precinct chairmen as announced by the president, are: Ballston, Mrs. Elizabeth Summers; Cherrydale, Mrs. Grace Donaldson; Clarendon, No. 1, Mrs. Mary P. Snyder; Clarendon, No. 2, Mrs. Sara E. Carl; East Falls Church, Mrs. Ruth Marcey; Lyon Park, Mrs. Harold R. Dinges; Rosslyn, Mrs. Louise Boelter, and Virginia Highlands, Mrs. Alice Semones.

Committee chairmen are: Membership, Mrs. Beatrice Unfold; program, Mrs. Clara E. Nevin; ways and means, Mrs. Crandall Mackey, and publicity, Mrs. Catherine M. Rogers.

Plans for the fourth birthday banquet, to be held at Arlington Hall the night of April 15, were completed.

The committee in charge of arrangements are Mrs. Alice Semones, chairman; Mrs. Catherine M. Rogers, Mrs. J. E. English, Mrs. Dexter Davis, Mrs. Crandall Mackey, Mrs. Sara E. Carl, Mrs. Grace Donaldson, Mrs. Isabelle Simpson and Mrs. Buelah B. Friess.

Comedians, musicians, singers and other entertainers will display their talent at the Washington Lee High School tonight at 8 o'clock, when the senior class of the Sunday school of the United Baptist Church of Cherrydale presents "Maj. Booz's Amateur Night."

The proceeds will go to the fund being raised to build a new United Baptist Church in Cherrydale.

The county board will hold an informal meeting tomorrow night with the school board to discuss the budget which becomes effective July 1. The meeting will be held in the offices of Supt. Fletcher Kemp, at the courthouse.

The Arlington County Kiwanis Club will hold its weekly luncheon meeting today at 12:30 p. m. at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Two Counties Plan Outdoor Projects

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., April 7.—Plans for a rural recreational reserve, involving expenditure of $26,346, which would provide sites for camping, boating and other outdoor activities, have been approved by representatives of youth and adult groups in Winchester and Frederick County, it was announced today.

It is proposed to finance the project through the WPA, a maximum of $21,725 having been allotted for cost of the labor. This will be supplemented by local contributions amounting to $4,621 for materials and equipment, with the Government contributing one-fourth the total cost.

One of the conditions on which the project will be possible is that it be sponsored by the county board of supervisors, making it a publicly owned project. It also will be necessary for a non-profit corporation to be organized not later than June 30.

KEEP your eyes open the next time you step up to a bar or into a liquor store and you will see that some whiskies have green stamps, some have red ones, some have blue and others have yellow.

Only one of these signifies that the whiskey is bottled in bond under the supervision of the United States Government and that stamp is GREEN.

The red stamp signifies nothing regarding the age, nothing regarding the proof. It is only an evidence that the Federal tax is paid.

The green stamp can be used only when the whiskey meets the following requirements:

● Every drop must be straight whiskey—at least four years in the wood.

● Every drop must be distilled in the United States, stored and ripened in the United States, and bottled under the U. S. Government supervision.

● Every drop must be 100 proof.

No other whiskey in the world has to meet such a rigid set of standards.

But even among American bottled in bond whiskies, there is a difference—for the quality of the whiskey as finally bottled is determined first of all by the skill and care with which it is distilled—and you can safely count on these when you see the National Distillers emblem on the label.

Grange Favors Bill to Set Up Valley Agency

Would, However, Modify Norris' Proposal for Mississippi Basin.

By the Associated Press.

The National Grange yesterday threw its "general support" to the proposal of Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, for a Mississippi Valley Authority.

It suggested modifications, however, to limit reclamation and foster soil conservation.

The organization's views were presented by Fred H. Brenckman, its Washington representative, to the Senate agriculture sub-committee considering the bill.

Fear that the proposed authority might cut power prices below cost was expressed to the sub-committee by Charles W. Kellogg, chairman of the Engineers Public Service Co.

"Our complaint against the TVA is that it makes prices below cost which cannot be met by private companies," he said. "We fear the same sort of thing might happen with a MVA."

Substantially Reduced.

Kellogg asserted the electric industry "voluntarily and gladly" is attempting to reduce prices throughout the country. Already, he said, "rates have been substantially reduced and the number of customers increased."

Kellogg said that under the measure "the arbitrary power to fix the allocation of investment cost as between flood control, navigation, irrigation and electric power is vested in three men without check by the Comptroller General or the Army engineers so that they can make about any showing they want to. * * *

"As if these * * * basic handicaps were not enough, the bill contains two further provisions of a discriminatory or repressive character. Section 14 provides that while contracts for the sale of power may be made for a 20-year term with private bodies, a contract with a private utility may be canceled on one year's notice.

"Even the TVA act requires five years' notice of cancellation of a power contract with a private utility. * * *"

New Projects Forecast.

Brenckman foresaw a likelihood that the bill would result in a large number of new irrigation projects.

"The National Grange is unalterably opposed to further additions to productive acreage by means of reclamation until such time as the unwieldy agricultural surplus, chiefly responsible for the present agricultural depression, has disappeared," he added.

"The Mississippi Valley Authority, properly administered under a law that is scientifically and economically sound, can become the Magna Charta of American conservation. In the absence of proper safeguards, in spite of our present good intentions it may become the veritable means of despoiling, under Federal auspices, our national heritage of soil fertility."

Norris' bill would set up an authority similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority to direct power development, flood control, land conservation and other activities in the Mississippi basin.

Court Denies Appeal In Liquor Conviction

A suit filed by Raymond Hawkins, contending that his recent conspiracy conviction was illegal because Government employes were serving on the grand jury which indicted him, was dismissed by Justice Peyton Gordon in District Supreme Court yesterday. Hawkins was convicted of conspiring to violate the liquor laws.

The suit was filed the day after the United States Court of Appeals held that service of Federal employes on criminal court juries was illegal. Justice Gordon ruled that Hawkins waived his right to appeal the case by neglecting to take action within the required time limit.

C. E. Roberts, Jr., Rites To Be Held Tomorrow

Funeral services for Charles Edgar Roberts, jr., 20, Navy Yard machinist's apprentice, of 111 Xenia street southeast, will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m., at the Murray Funeral Chapel, 2007 Nichols avenue southeast. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Roberts was drowned Sunday in the Potomac River, when he tried to swim ashore after his canoe tipped over. His body was recovered from the river near Sheppard's Landing late Monday. It was taken to the morgue where John L. Roberts, the dead boy's brother, certified the identification.

Mouse Gets Cheese; Admirals View Trap

By the Associated Press.

Part of the Navy's high command was locked in battle yesterday with a mouse.

After setting traps all about a section of the Navy Building in fruitless attempts to catch the rodent, which had been feeding on files of the press relations department, a marine was ordered last night to set a specially baited trap in "a particularly delicate fashion" among the records themselves.

Early this morning, captains and admirals came in to survey the results of their campaign. The trap was there, but the cheese and the mouse were gone.

supporting President Roosevelt, under whose Administration recovery has undeniably begun, or by wrecking the New Deal and, returning to the system in vogue when Roosevelt was inaugurated."

Nation's Need Is Work.

Filene said he was "not even intimating that President Hoover or the Republican Party was responsible for the depression."

The "real issue of the campaign," he declared, was how to get the Nation back to work, since work was the primary requisite for national prosperity.

"Our problems have not yet been solved by any means," he said, "and they will not be until organized business recovers from this fit of angry embarrassment and is willing to co-operate with organized labor and organized agriculture for Nation-wide, planned prosperity."

The Roosevelt Administration, Filene said, has "worked courageously on the Herculean task" of achieving a planned prosperity for all the Nation, in opposition to "the rich and powerful beneficiaries of the old order who have become so concerned with their traditional rights and privileges that they have not yet awakened to the necessity for a new deal."

Mills to Support G. O. P.

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—Ogden Mills, Secretary of the Treasury under President Hoover, said today he would support the Republican Party, "no matter who the candidate," and added:

"As for myself, I find private life too pleasant to accept a Cabinet position."

Mills, en route with members of his family and friends to New York after a vacation in California, said he believed the Republican Party had a good chance for victory in the November election, but declined to predict the party's Presidential nominee.

Radio "Tough" on Hoover.

Ogden, Utah, April 7 (AP).—Herbert Hoover, puffing a big cigar, lounged in his Pullman compartment today and complained that speech-making isn't what it used to be.

"Time was," said the former President, "that you could go around the country making the same speech at each town.

"A speech is only good once—because the public is quick to detect repetition."

Commenting on the political outlook, he said:

"I'm surer than ever that the Republicans are going to win the next election. At least, the anti-New Dealers are on their way to win."

"Looks Like Landon" to Meyer.

Topeka, Kans., April 7 (AP).—Eugene Meyer, governor of the Federal Reserve System under President Hoover, said here today "it looks like Gov. Alf M. Landon would be nominated by the Republicans for the Presidency."

The Washington publisher and Mrs. Meyer stopped off here today for a short visit at the Landon home.

"The most extraordinary development in national politics today is the advancement to the forefront by Gov. Landon. He has brains and character. It looks like he will be nominated by the Republicans."

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer are returning from a vacation in California.

Fletcher Sees G. O. P. "to Rescue."

Boston, April 7 (AP).—Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the National Republican Committee, told New England party leaders today there is "a crusading spirit to rescue the country from the planners and wreckers in Washington."

Republican chances for victory were "splendid," he assured a conference to co-ordinate the work of the national and State committees.

State Representative Charles W. Hedges of Quincy, president of the Legislative Landon Club, announced tonight that 56 State Representatives and 10 State Senators had joined the club.

Hedges asserted that three-fourths of eligible Republican members of the House favored Gov. Landon of Kansas as the Presidential nominee.

Although a slate of Landon delegates has been offered in only 2 of 15 Congressional districts in the State, Hedges reported Landon backers were conducting a State-wide campaign for voters to write in the name of Landon as their choice for President.

Health Aids Hear Plan to Fight Fever

The time may not be far distant when monkey farms will be established for the sole purpose of producing serum to combat yellow fever, delegates to the Pan-American Conference of National Health Directors were told yesterday.

Dr. Barros Barreto, Brazil's health chief, made the prediction in the course of his address taken from immunized monkeys is just as effective as serum made from the blood of immunized human beings.

Dr. F. A. Carmella, assistant surgeon general of the Public Health Service, opened the yellow fever discussion, emphasizing its control as an international problem. Dr. Barreto said the disease is more widespread than is generally supposed, stressing the difficulty of controlling the jungle type of yellow fever.

The conference unanimously agreed the importance of smallpox vaccination cannot be overemphasized. Among speakers on the subject were Dr. George W. McCoy, director of the National Institute of Health, and Assistant Surgeon General J. P. Leake.

Plane From Capital Blown Off Course

Cleveland, April 7, (AP).—C. T. Tolpo, Central Airlines station manager here, said one of its passenger ships out of Washington encountered "soupy" weather and, climbing to higher altitude, was blown nearly 100 miles off its course, landing at Erie, Pa., instead of Cleveland.

Pilot William Day informed him, Tolpo said, that he purposely avoided a scheduled Pittsburgh landing because the descent through the overcast sky would cause ice to form on the ship's wings.

Day reported a wind of approximately 75 miles per hour above the dense atmosphere. Day's copilot was Ted Douglas. Both are from Washington. They flew "blind" to a point above Erie, where they landed at 1:01 p. m.

Alberta Establishes Code for Merchants

Edmonton, Alta., April 7 (AP).—The first "Master Code" in Canada was placed in effect today. It governs the operations of approximately 8,000 retail merchants in Alberta.

A special number of the Alberta Gazette contained an order by the lieutenant-governor-in-council making the "code of fair competition and business practice for retail trade" operative throughout the province from April 6.

The order-in-council also brought into force immediately a code of fair competition and business practice and schedule of prices of the cleaning and dyeing industry in this province.

This story will interest many Men and Women

NOT long ago I was like some friends I have... low in spirits... run-down... out of sorts... tired easily and looked terrible. I knew I had no serious organic trouble so I reasoned sensibly... as my experience has since proven... that work, worry, colds and whatnot had just worn me down.

I had been listening to the S.S.S. Radio Program and began to wonder if my trouble was not lowered strength in my blood... I started a course of S.S.S. Tonic Treatment. At the end of ten days I noticed a change... I followed directions faithfully... a tablespoonful before each meal.

The color began to come back to my skin... I felt better... I no longer tired easily and soon I felt that those red-blood-cells were back to so-called fighting strength.

The confidence mother has always had in S.S.S.... which is still her stand-by when she feels run-down ... convinced me I ought to try this Treatment... it is great to feel strong again and like my old self.

"Yes, I have come back to where I feel like myself again."

There is no guess work in the S.S.S. Tonic Treatment... decades of popular acceptance and enthusiastic words of praise by users themselves speak even louder than the scientific appraisal of the progressively improved S.S.S product which has caused millions to say to their friends—"S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

Americanism Must Win.

The Sisson bill to kill the little red rider has been favorably indorsed by the House sub-committee on District education, in spite of feverish efforts to prevent that action. The first step toward liberating Washington teachers from an intolerable insult to their integrity and partiotism is thus successfully negotiated. Now, the bill must come before the full District committee where, if remarks of the members are any guide, it will receive similar support. Then, on the floor of the House, it will be put to the crucial vote.

It is here that Mr. Sisson and his colleagues must be on the alert. However certain they may be of the approval of the great majority of Representatives, they must not rest until they have converted those sentiments into tangible votes. Last year the rider was slipped through while few Congressmen knew what was happening. Its repeal must not be prevented this year by similar neglect and under-estimation of the advantage possessed by those who only need to avert a vote.

Washington teachers and pupils are not the only ones involved in this issue. Though the red rider itself applies only to local schools, in a very real sense the future of education throughout the United States will be determined by the fate of the Sisson bill. The eyes of the Nation are on its Capital in this matter. If a fanatical minority here is allowed to throttle academic freedom, a deplorable example will have been set for the country as a whole. If the red rider is renounced, the victory for the principles of Americanism will be equally pronounced. This is a really vital fight.

In The Wake Of Tragedy.

The havoc wrought in the South by tornadoes this week, following so closely on the recent floods, creates a situation which taxes not only public agencies, but also the invaluable machinery of the Red Cross.

Food and clothing, medical assistance, and antitoxins are immediate necessities which are being rushed to the devastated communities. The death toll is tragically high, but it is the unsheltered living and the hundreds of critically injured who need immediate help. And because of the almost unprecedented occurrence of two such major catastrophes within so short a time, both the finances and the personnel of the Red Cross organization are being strained to the limit. Workers from California and other far Western States have been summoned to help meet this new Eastern emergency. No special appeal for funds has gone out yet for this second disaster, but officials estimate that the money on hand will not be sufficient.

The relief machinery is already in action, feeding, clothing, and alleviating pain. But Nature has dealt a peculiarly ugly blow this time, with two widely separated areas laid open simultaneously to the ravages of suffering and disease. So many Americans will not wait for a further call before offering their assistance to those agencies which can function effectively only as long as the sinews of relief are available to their devoted workers on the scene.

The Truth Of Kites.

The cherry blossoms have crept upon us and not a word yet in these columns about kites. This was an oversight. Fortunately, April is showing enough of the leonine bluster, usually associated with its predecessor, to make the discussion not entirely abstract.

Three small boys were taken recently by their mother to an open tract bordering the Memorial highway. The wind from the river was steady and their kites rose easily once running had lifted them into the air. But not to stay up. With perverse swoops they would veer from right to left, finally nose-diving abruptly into the ground. Passing motorists drew up to the curb to watch the sport. Finally, one man stepped out of his car and asked permission to assist the discouraged Franklins.

Ripping up a handkerchief, he first added tails to their craft. And the harnesses needed careful adjustment—so. Once again the kites soared into the sky, this time smoothly and surely. The stranger coached the boys in jogging their kites higher and showed them how to take advantage of every puff. And this was how to reel in quickly during a lull. Then he proposed to send a "message" up to a kite. A scrap of paper was found and a hole torn in its center. Placed on the string, it was blown up to the peak of the harness. He explained that in such a manner human aeronauts of earlier days riding on teams of box kites could receive instructions from below. The boys were all for building such an apparatus immediately.

But no, that would take time and special materials. The man must go. He explained to the mother that he had two small sons at home in the West himself, and that when he saw her boys flying kites he could not resist coming over to help them. But that was not the whole truth. Sons or no sons, the live tug of a kite riding high into a spring morning has an appeal no man with any sense of romance can resist.

The Case Of Edward Jones.

The case of Mr. J. Edward Jones, a New York dealer in oil royalty participation certificates, has provided a majority of the Supreme Court with occasion for sharp and timely strictures on the arbitrary exercise of governmental power. And these comments are none the less welcome because of Mr. Jones' assertion that the decision "probably ranks as the outstanding one since the inception of our Government," in safeguarding individual liberties. That rhetoric only encourages a smile at the expense of one scarcely convincingly cast in the role of martyr.

Examination of the opinion shows that there was only one real issue between the majority and the minority of the court. This was whether Mr. Jones, having withdrawn a registration application which the Securities and Exchange Commission found to contain highly questionable statements and omissions, should be allowed to retire in fairly good order or should be publicly humiliated. The opinion of the majority of six justices was that the punitive attitude of the commission "finds no support in right, principle or in law." For the minority of three (Justices Cardozo, Brandeis and Stone), "falsehood and evasion" seem to be encouraged by permitting "an offending registrant to stifle an inquiry by precipitate retreat on the eve of his exposure."

The majority opinion, quoting Mr. Justice Holmes' famous strictures on "a fishing expedition for the chance that something discreditable might turn up," denounced the harrying tactics employed by the S. E. C. The minority, agreeing that no warning against "the abuse of power by officialdom unchallenged" can be untimely, nevertheless felt that in this case the S. E. C. was well within its powers. Since the constitutionality of that agency was not touched upon in the suit it would seem of no great importance, one way or the other, except for the strong position assumed in the majority opinion.

These six justices, with a courage which is found at all the high points of legal history, deliberately faced the rather questionable procedure of Mr. Jones in order to examine a vital principle. The difference between the emotional and the intellectual approach to a problem roots in the willingness or unwillingness to examine it in clear perspective. To the minority of the court it seemed of fundamental importance to "pillory" a suspected wrongdoer. To the majority the basic question was whether tyrannical procedure shall be allowed to gain a foothold by, quoting words used by Justice Bradley just 50 years ago, "silent approaches and slight deviations from legal modes of procedure."

None who have observed the complete overthrow of guaranteed liberties in other countries; none who have watched the insidious encroachments represented most recently by the search and seizure tactics of the Black committee, will feel that in balance the majority opinion of the court is guilty of the "hyperbole" which the minority charges. And this belief is only strengthened by the fact that its ringing assertion of principles was laid down in behalf of a petitioner whose case of itself arouses no sympathy.

If hyperbole is to be brought into the argument it may be said that the minority opinion in this case is not immune from the charge. For the minority reminds us that "there are dangers in untruths and half-truths when certificates masquerading as securities pass current in the market." In this case there were no certificates. But aside from that, it seems exaggerated for members of the court to make this point so strongly in behalf of those who choose to risk their money in speculation. These words would have been just as appropriate, and would have had rather more general validity, when the gold clause decision substantially validated the abrogation of solemn contracts of the Federal Government.

No Strength In "Numbers."

Since the United States Court of Appeals has decided that the "numbers" racket is a lottery, it appears strange that this decision was not reached years ago. Webster defines a lottery as "a scheme for the distribution of prizes by lot or chance." The so-called numbers game is precisely that.

Belated though it is, this decision from the Court of Appeals gives the police a more powerful weapon against petty gamblers than they have ever before had. To those who are inclined to regard "numbers" as an innocent pastime, this may not appear to be a significant gain for law enforcement. But everyone who is aware of the large profits reaped from this racket, of the impetus it gives to more serious gambling, and of its encouragement to organized criminal gangs, will appreciate the importance of bringing "numbers" operators to book.

In the past the police have been seriously handicapped in dealing with this problem. Appeals for new legislation have gone unheeded. Now it appears that a single decision has brought "numbers" runners and their bosses face to face with penalties ranging up to three years' imprisonment and a $500 fine. Lieut. Little of the police vice squad may well be elated over this outcome of the John R. Forte case. If the police do their part, the "numbers" racket with all its attendant evils should soon be under salutary control.

The Community's Problem.

Notable progress is being made toward the development of more equitable fiscal relations between the District and Federal Governments. Several groups of citizens are concentrating upon this most important local issue. Their views have been sympathetically heard by the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations. The haphazard policy of making lump-sum "contributions" to the District, without the slightest relation to the size of the budget or to the national character of some items included, is so indefensible that many thoughtful legislators are eager for a change.

One of the most severe indictments of the present system ever presented to Congress comes from the Citizens' Joint Committee on Fiscal Relations between the United States and the District of Columbia. Its petition completely riddles the arguments in favor of an arbitrary allowance for the District. That policy irks members of Congress as well as local residents. Outside of the District it leads to the impression that Congress is bestowing special favors upon taxpayers of Washington. Actually it results in the evasion by Congress of its unquestioned obligation to finance the national functions of the Capital City.

While advocating a larger lump sum so long as this practice is followed, the committee's petition clearly points to the necessity of working out a scientific fiscal relationship. That objective is also carried a long step forward by the unanimous proposal of the Federation of Citizens Associations to establish a permanent commission to apportion the expenses of maintaining the Capital City. Still another suggestion has been advanced by the Burroughs Citizens Association. Under this plan the Federation of Citizens Associations would call a convention of all civic groups to consider changes in the local government and its fiscal problems.

These proposals are significant chiefly because they reflect the widespread concern of Washingtonians over the drift toward chaos in the District's municipal affairs. The community has arrived at the conclusion that something must be done. There is not yet a unanimity of opinion as to what course should be pursued, but the strength of the movement is such that difficulties of this sort should be easily overcome. Already most of the civic, professional, religious, commercial and educational groups are represented on the committee which is fighting for an adequate public health appropriation. This group appears eager to extend the scope of its activities to include the fiscal problem if assurance of community-wide support is forthcoming.

The method by which the objective is sought is not important, provided it is open, straightforward and effective. The objective itself is of the utmost importance. Not a single community problem now baffling District officials can be definitely solved until some equitable method of determining the Federal outlay for the District has been agreed upon. That single fact should be enough to bring every civic agency into cooperation with the leaders who are so diligently promoting this community cause.

Marilyn Miller.

When five-year-old Mary Ellen Reynolds made her first appearance on the boards as one of "The Columbian Trio" she was simply another pretty child of the theater, shining in the reflected glory of her mother and stepfather, both veteran hoofers. Literally brought up in the wings, she acquired professional poise at an age when most children are cutting paper dolls at kindergarten. Later, dancing in London, she attracted the attention of Lee Shubert, who brought her back to this country to delight Winter Garden audiences.

It was under the direction of Flo Ziegfeld in 1918 that the little Reynolds girl, by then known as Marilyn Miller, gained the public attention which she was to enjoy for an unusual length of time. A couple of decades is not so much as Bernhardts and Barrymores reckon careers, but it is a very long period when gauging the popularity of a musical comedy dancer.

Marilyn Miller had all the attributes of a typical Broadway favorite—she was young and lovely-looking, had a sweet voice, possessed acting ability and mastery of nearly every type of dancing from toe to tap. Thousands, remembering her charm and vivacity, will find it hard to believe that one so vivid is now dead.

Another advantage a candidate has in speaking over radio is that the voters can't see his slanting forehead.

Franklin Park Next?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I'm not the one who knocks for the sake of knocking, but what your readers say about the costly and needless desecration of Lafayette Park merits notice. Despite the misguided intent of this "improvement," however, perhaps final judgment should be withheld till the "work" has been completed.

Unlike Union and Madison squares in New York, this park does not support a large and continuous stream of traffic. Except during rush hours it has a rustic peacefulness. The center walks with graveled fringe were ideal, especially in view of the long tropical climate that belts the region every summer. To rip them up and substitute concrete walks topped with white cement mixture seems idiotic.

But I can't agree with a reader that a local vote would cure such conditions. This case bears the earmarks of just such abuses as exist under political governments, where the enthroned few take pleasure in voiding the will of the majority. Of course I know it is irreverence to the Administration to find fault with anything done under the sacred name of public "works." But the question now is, does Franklin Park or some other spot get it next?

A. A. FLYNN.
Hyattsville, Md., April 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

There would appear to be few persons in authority interested in the viewpoint of the average disfranchised citizen living in the District of Columbia. Now it is the entombment of the city's park spaces.

This surprise attack upon the breathing spaces of casual beauty may or may not have been planned to the end that once the damage be found committed opposition would to that extent be lessened through a defeatist acceptance of it. Questioned, the answer was appalling. It was that unless these parks were kept neat they would be taken over for "alienpurposes," whatever that sinister threat may mean.

Next month the lilacs at Eighteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue would have been at the height of their blooming. Yet the outpouring of dollars into the pockets of concrete mixers has robbed us of this perennial loveliness. And has there been any official stand taken by the ostensible caretakers of the public weal, the women's organizations? Only a handful of public-spirited women individually have banded together to try to stem the tide of uglification that is enveloping the city. Were these bushes removed but to preserve them and the intention held to return them when the auto tracks of concrete are completed, there would not be heard this despairing wail from the depths.

It is, however, not the intention of the persons in authority to return the bushes to their old habitation, but rather to run a little border of privet around the edges of an infinitesimal strip of grass blades, utterly ruining the plan formed by L'Enfant and substituting for it an institutionalized plan, for the benefit of concrete mixers, or worse.

In heaven's name, let us not lose the small glimpses of heaven we have attained, no matter who thinks it unnecessary, nor what organization is against it.

'The Post Has Nothing To Take Back.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have read with interest a communication in The Post of April 5 in behalf of the Florida canal which undertakes to challenge certain of your editorial facts and comments. The communication is signed by H. H. Buckman, an able, professional propagandist for the canal. From this and other indications—including what appears to be a procanal series of lectures at Government expense—I take it that an effort will be made at the appropriate time to resurrect this thoroughly discredited enterprise. Under such circumstances, I think it is my duty to assert as my own view that The Post's various editorial facts and comments are far more accurate and revelatory than the Buckman article.

Let me illustrate. Buckman says: "The cost of the project is $143,000,000 * * * repeated mention of a cost ranging from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 can only be the result of lack of information."

Now what are the facts? The engineers estimate a base cost of $143,000,000. To that figure the engineers themselves add $17,000,000 for interest during construction. That brings us to $160,000,000. This cost estimate is on the basis of the price index of June, 1934, according to these same engineers. Since then the price index has gone up on many construction commodities—frequently as much as 25 per cent. Add that factor. Meanwhile, this cost estimate was based on regular contract labor and not on work-relief labor. The canal is being built with relief labor. The engineers themselves say this substantially increases the heavy labor cost. Add that factor. The final figure will be a minimum of $200,000,000—if we are very lucky. These, and not the Buckman conclusions, are the "simple facts of the record," to use a Buckman phrase.

One might go farther. Mr. Buckman dismisses in 13 words the bitter fears of central and southern Florida that the canal would ruin their ground-water supply. Many competent engineers and geologists categorically testify otherwise. They may be wrong. The trouble is that no one can tell until the damage is done. If these geologists are unhappily right, the damage claims that will pile up against your Uncle Sam will make the $200,000,000 look like pin money.

Mr. Buckman invites the inference that the board of engineers of the War Department has passed conclusively upon the project. They have not. Their review has been suspended at the request of the proponents of the canal themselves. I venture the prophesy that if we ever see that report and review it will be utterly critical of a sea-level canal at this point. The canal was rejected by PWA engineers. It is repudiated by the facts submitted in the report of the Department of Commerce.

Mr. Buckman repeats the hypothetical calculations upon which the canal relies for its economic justification. These calculations conclude that if all the available traffic should transit the canal, it would jusitfy an investment of $160,000,000. But what an "if!" The trouble is that little or none of the "available traffic" either wants the canal, or would use it if built, or considers it economically justified. This, at least, is the last available word on the subject from the ship operators themselves. The whole dream is a boondoggling mirage at the expense of the already hard-pressed taxpayer.

The Post has nothing to take back in respect to any of its Flordia canal editorials that I have seen. The House Committee on Appropriations, the House itself, the Senate Committee on Appropriations, and the Senate, voting upon two different occasions, have declined to indorse the canal. The President started it by executive order. He thought thus to commit the Congress to its conclusion. Congress declines thus to permit emergency funds, allocated by the Executive, to be the "springboard" from which the Federal budget is jumped into enormous subsequent commitments over which they have had no right of primary decision.

The Florida canal, in spite of all that may be conjured by its aggressive apologists, remains a shining example of the wrong way to spend the public money.

Puerto Rican Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A new bill has been introduced, and is under study, in the House of Representatives of Puerto Rico.

The bill tends to create in Puerto Rico an institution whose purpose will be the furtherance of amity, co-operation and mutual relations between all the peoples of North and South America.

I understand that the name of the association has been changed to "Association Pro Fraternity of the Americas," and the structure will consist of 21 halls and each one will be a representative and informative bureau of the American governments.

Puerto Rico being centrally located, and close to the Panama Canal, naturally and logically recognizes itself, by this project, as the heart of America, from which may flow new impulses of vitality and real action in the cause of a true Pan Americanism, not based upon mere politics and economy, but depending more on culture, history, racial respect and the Roosevelt theory of the good neighbor. The new Puerto Rican association will be composed of cultural members, appointed by their proper governments.

Now that the United States is turning more attention to Latin America and vice versa, Puerto Rico's influence in the furtherance of such trend of relations, should well be appreciated and supported. It shows that Puerto Ricans are wide awake to their responsibilities and that their mind and interest are not merely satisfied with the material viewpoints of local interest as is often thrust at them.

"Maj. Berry's Blunder."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial of April 3, "Major Berry's Blunder," is a marked exception to your usually well-reasoned editorials.

What you say, and imply, in this editorial is, in effect, that Maj. Berry, as industrial co-ordinator, probably has a program good for both capital and labor, but that as an active participant in an effort to continue in power the only political administration that has ever shown a disposition to consider seriously such a program, Maj. Berry has destroyed his usefulness.

You would have Maj. Berry renounce and abandon his leadership of labor; a leadership which he had exercised with such wisdom and fairness through long years that his outstanding qualifications for the work of co-ordinator for industrial co-operation were recognized by labor and capital alike. And you would have him do this on no other grounds than that now his leadership of labor has political effect.

Just as The Post would not camouflage its opposition to a likely appointee to the United State Supreme Court known to oppose the freedom of the press, so Maj. Berry does not camouflage his support of an administration friendly to his program of industrial co-operation.

What your editorial really advocates is that Maj. Berry should confine himself to political pussyfooting. On reflection, is this not so?

The Post Impressionist

A Wreath of Allium Sativum.

Post Office, Wednesday.

MISS JEANETTE MACDONALD—yes, even the gifted and great Jeanette; by right of sound and motion picture achievement, The MacDonald—takes issue with your columnist on a delicate question. She writes us:

Beverly Hills, California.

Dear Post Impressionist—An orchid to you for your cute Column—but of course you would rather have garlic! If garlic blooms, how about my sending you a bouquet?

However, please send me your salad recipe. I should love to have it, and I do not expect to be in Washington very soon to avail myself of that gracious invitation.

Sincerely,
JEANETTE MACDONALD

We admire Miss MacDonald—as an artist: there is no reader of this Column who can be ignorant of our admiration for Miss MacDonald. But in that letter of hers we detect a deplorable duplicity, an ill-concealed irony.

When, a week or so ago, we discoursed on her delectable Hollywood dinners, we ventured the suggestion that the Hamlet of her salad—whereof we gave the formula—lacked the Salad-Prince of Denmark: a salad without garlic was, we declared, like a singing movie without Jeanette. Like Whistler, on a certain memorable occasion, we weren't arguing with her; we were just telling her—because, as we further remarked, we ourselves made the best salad in the world, and garlic was its vital ingredient.

We even went further. We added that, if Miss MacDonald would only come to Washington in person, and would then let us mix a salad for her, she would pleasantly learn the error of her culinary ways.

And now she is ironic about our salad's most potent factor!

Well——

We repeat: We admire Miss MacDonald as a vocal and histrionic artist.

But we insist that, when it comes to the art of salad-making, we are in a position to give her lessons—if only because of her prejudice against garlic.

If we wanted to be as malicious as Miss MacDonald, we might say that, whereas there is little else reprehensibly Victorian about her, this intolerance of garlic is at least late Victorian. Indeed, we are deterred merely by the truth. Although the real gourmets of Victorian times—like real gourmets throughout all the high history of gastronomy—loved garlic in their salads, there was considerable turning-up of feminine noses (English and American feminine noses) against garlic—in public. Even against onions and leeks—against the national flower of Wales!

Ask Mr. H. G. Wells, whose latest bombshell is an amazing motion-picture about "Things" (that he thinks are) "To Come." He once told the Post-Impressionist that Mrs. Jane Wells, who had a tremendous respect for Robert and Mrs. Browning, had also a tremendous contempt for onions—until he took her around to the Brownings' place one night, after the theater, and discovered the poetic pair drinking ale and eating onion sandwiches. Then Mrs. Wells' reverence for the Brownings triumphed over her onion complex . . .

By this year of 1936, social evolution and the enfranchisement of Woman should have triumphed over the garlic-inhibition of all women.

Garlic?

Who hates tomatoes now—however the eater pronounces them? Yet people have been eating tomatoes for less than a century.

Garlic?

It's not 50 years since you couldn't get Americans to eat ox-tail, let alone sweetbreads.

Miss Lisa Gardiner, delightful dancer of Washington, has sent us word: "When you advocated garlic in the salad, I nearly wrote to say how much I enjoyed your Column." So what's the matter with Hollywood?

Garlic isn't fattening. Have they added, to the invention of voice reproduction, some manner of conveying scents? How do people out there keep away vampires—not vamps or bats, but real dead-alive once-human bloodsuckers of the Dracula sort? Aren't there any on "The Coast?" Owen Wister has assured this columnist that there's a strong vampire tradition in Connecticut—and if California has heard about it, California will soon be growing bigger vampires than Connecticut. Well, one of the ways of keeping them off is tying a necklace of garlic around your neck.

No: If we revealed our recipe to any human beings, they would be the Misses MacDonald and Gardiner. But we won't reveal it to any human being—we'll reveal only its results.

Meanwhile, how about those column-readers who nobly adopted our faith in Trojan Helen—and how about gourmet Dr. Danziger—helping us to convict Miss MacDonald of her single crime?

Manila And Tokyo

By Vicente Albano Pacis

Propagandists Busy.

Manila.

SINCE the inauguration of the Commonwealth four months ago, Japanese propagandists, most of them counting with undefined official backing, have been going on all 13 cylinders in the Philippines. Tours to Japan, some of them openly subsidized from Tokyo are being organized at a fast rate, and the Filipinos are being overwhelmed with an ever-multiplying pro-Japanese literature. Key men like college professors, government officials and newspapermen are being fast enlisted in what appears a vast propaganda scheme.

At this very moment, there are four separate spring tours to Japan being organized in Manila, two of which are manifestly backed by official or commercial Japanese interests. First is the "educators' tour," the second of its kind in six months, which recruits students and professors from local colleges and universities. It is managed by a Rev. Yamaguchi, priest of the Buddhist temple in Manila. The so-called "writers' tour," organized by a young Filipino who was in the sticks not over a year ago, attracts young newspaper men and other writers. The party leaving this week will be the second of its kind. Both the educational and writing tours are generally understood to be officially backed by Tokyo.

Two other kinds of tours are to be added presently to these more or less established ones. These are the legislative tour which is being formed by members of the National Assembly, including the speaker and a group of subscription contest winners, composed of girls and women, financed by one of the richest newspaper syndicates in the Philippines. Both are apparently entirely private in character, although they are potentially capable of being turned into propaganda affairs.

* * * *

THE first educational tour brought quite a substantial result in the form of pro-Japanese propaganda. While in Tokyo and other Japanese cities, the tourists were royally entertained by business, educational and official entities. When they returned to the islands, they gave lectures in their own institutions and other places. Presently, a book or two on the trip appeared on the scene.

What makes the affair even more suspicious is that some of the tourists manifestly cannot afford the trip, yet they are being taken care of somehow. There is the case, for instance, of a cub reporter on a Manila daily. Poor, receiving practically nothing but the minimum transportation allowance, he cannot even afford to lose such a dubious "job." But he is joining the tour because the manager, with the aid of the local Japanese consulate, intervened merely for the purpose of enabling the "cub" to return to his "job" upon his return.

But here is a rich paragraph from the circular of the manager of the newspaper-writers' tour to a member:

"In return for this free trip to Japan which I am giving you, you are to write six articles, two or three of which will be included in the book on Japan I shall release soon after our trip, the rest to be published in a quarterly magazine devoted to the Orient which I intend to establish . . . please begin giving thought to the following subjects: Personalities, Press, Japan-Philippine Affinities . . ."

Had the young manager written this paragraph a year ago, he would have been considered fit for a psychopathic hospital. Today, however, he maintains an expensive suite of offices in one of Manila's most modern office buildings, and publishes periodically books on the Philippines and Japan which he distributes free.

* * * *

THERE is, in fact, a tendency by some of the less scrupulous Filipinos to regard the present relationship with Japan as a racket. On the assumption that Japan will be the next sovereign power in the islands, lawyers are beginning to contact Japanese clients; business men are starting to establish financial connections with Japanese firms and banks; public officials are looking for opportunities to shake hands with Count Soandso or Gen. Thatandthat; and others are on the lookout for good openings to drum up Japanese business.

There is also a new fad among educated Filipinos to imbibe Oriental culture, mostly Japanese; and societies of cultural pretenses are springing up. To date, there are at least three such societies in Manila, the latest being the Japanese-Philippine society organized after a similar association had been formed in Tokyo under the leadership of powerful officials and members of the nobility.

The situation resulting from Japanese attempts to indoctrinate Filipinos has a peculiar quirk. Most American residents in the Philippines desire to frustrate Philippine independence. Their purpose is to prolong American control of the Philippines; their method is to create a fear of independence among the natives. This fear, however, may ultimately boil down to the belief that they are not suited for free nationhood, but that Japan is their next logical master.

New Maryland Taxes

Special Session Of Assembly Yields Fair Formula To Raise $3,350,000 To Help Unemployed And Finance Security Program.

By V. J. Wyckoff.

Special Correspondence of the Post.

Annapolis, Md.

THE proof of the pudding lies in the eating and by the same test the success of the recent special session of the Maryland Assembly will depend on the adequacy of the revenues from the taxes voted for relief.

If, by this time next year, the receipts have equaled the estimates then one can say that a good job was done. Even an analysis of the present setup is fairly favorable from a critical point of view. New taxes under the best conditions are difficult to enact, and certainly the session that closed here early on April 3 worked under real handicaps.

It lacked effective executive leadership. It was bullied, wined and dined by a swarm of liquor lobbyists. It allowed petty local bills to clog the calendars. And finally the members for the most part loafed along to within several days of the end and then physically exhausted themselves in all-night wrangles.

* * * *

FROM Maryland's capitol came the following measures to replace the gross retail tax. There are four new taxes: a 1 per cent amusement tax, a 10 per cent cosmetics tax, a 75-cent levy on every barrel of beer sold in Maryland and a 5-cent-per-gallon tax on whisky manufacturing. (No change was made in the consumption taxes of $1.10 per gallon on liquors and 20 cents per gallon on wines). The existing domestic corporate franchise taxes were tripled, and the rates raised four times for foreign corporations. In addition, the current 1 per cent automobile titling tax was extended another year. These taxes are expected to yield $3,350,000 during the next 12 months starting April 1.

It is natural that there should be confusion in the minds of many concerning the need for this money and other sums that are scheduled for public welfare. One must distinguish between the permanent State social security program and the emergency (temporary) direct relief.

The first group of measures includes old age pensions and aid to dependent children. For pensions the appropriation is $3,000,000. Of this amount $1,000,000 comes from the State, $500,000 from local levies and $1,500,000 from the Federal Government. For dependent children the total is $2,350,000; the State gives $1,450,000, local units $200,000, and Washington $700,0000.

For the direct relief of the unemployed destitute in Maryland the minimum figure of $1,800,000 has been set as the contribution from the State. Add this amount to the State's pledge for old-age pensions and dependent children and the total is $4,250,000 of which $3,350,000 is expected to come from the recent tax legislation and the balance of $900,000 is the present State treasury surplus from the defunct gross retail tax.

* * * *

WHAT about these taxes—are they good or bad as tax measures go? An answer to this question must be divided into two parts. First, are the taxes individually sound? Second, do the taxes weaken or strengthen the State tax system as a whole?

The cosmetic, amusement, beer and whisky taxes may be classified either as excises or as restricted sales taxes and as such will be paid in part by the ultimate consumer. It is difficult to foretell to what extent the man in the street will be conscious of his contributions to the State welfare program. If competition in the sale of the particular article is severe, it is probable that the manufacturers or the distributors will have to absorb most of the tax. This absorption in some cases will mean smaller operating profits and real distress. In other instances it will be possible to balance the tax with a change in the quality or the quantity of the article.

A sales tax is generally considered regressive. That is, it hits hardest those least able to pay. A 10 cent tax on a $1 purchase of cosmetics by a shop girl is usually a heavier burden than for the wife of the shop owner. But there are features that more than make up for this defect. Essentially the items of cosmetics, amusements, beer and whisky offer a nice balance in human wants between luxuries and necessities. If the tax is oppressive (and these Maryland taxes are not) the use of such articles can be restricted. Inconvenient, to be sure, but there will follow no destruction of the basic fabrics of life. On the other hand the established tastes for such articles and services assure the State a steady income when a low tax is used.

Thus these taxes are justifiable on the score of expedient revenue producers and not on the more honored tests of benefits received or ability to pay. In some States the beer and whisky levies would have a regulatory or punitive aspect, but such considerations probably did not press heavily on the minds of the Maryland legislators. The titling tax on those automobiles used for pleasure would for purposes of analysis fall in the above group of four taxes.

As an individual item the annual corporate franchise tax that varies in amount with the capitalization of the business has much to recommend it. A business certainly profits from the social stability assured by a State government and the corporate form of enterprise carries advantages that have a monetary value. The tax, thus, partly measures benefits received from the State. And renewals of a franchise indicate earnings at least favorable enough to justify continued existence and by inference an ability to pay. Moreover it is a useful tax because the receipts can be rather accurately foretold.

* * * *

THE second important question about the new legislation concerns the State tax structure as a whole. Has it been weakened or strengthened?

To the extent that these taxes are temporary to take care of emergency relief they really do not make much difference in the tax system. The citizens of Maryland expect that the depression will pass and that most of the unemployed destitute will be reabsorbed by industry. But when expenditures in this State are assigned to a long-range social security program then there is a proposition of a different color. By definition such outlays are permanent. And the finance committees of the two houses of the Assembly will have to keep this in mind when they meet next year to arrange the State tax program.

Their arrangements might well be guided by two considerations. First, the security program from now on will form an appreciable item in the State budgets. Second, Maryland can no longer ignore the basic changes in tax practice and theory that are taking place in State financing in this country. These facts are certainly in the minds of the State tax commission and the fiscal experts of the General Assembly. It is, therefore, probable that in the near future the legislators will bring forward proposals along the following lines: A moderate consumers' retail sales tax exempting purchases under a small sum and for the basic necessities of life; the relinquishment by the State of its tax on general property; the creation of a graduated personal net income tax with low rates and low exemptions.

* * * *

THE framing of a tax program for a State is a technical job. It should rest on a thoughtful, competent piece of work by a research committee. This fact is being acknowledged by a greater and greater number of State legislatures. And although it is a habit for many assemblymen to regard a nonpartisan tax recommendation as a scrap of paper, bad habits can be changed if the voters really get serious. Certainly it is true that the more responsible representatives welcome and are guided by such specialized information.

radio speech defending large AAA benefit payments, stated:

"The bulk of the money paid under AAA programs went to the men who needed it most, the small producers."

Saying that the public has a right to know how the AAA money was spent, and that he personally believed "the wisest course probably would be to make the facts known as soon as possible," he added:

"The decision is a proper one for Congress to make and we will be pleased to have a definite policy established by legislative authority."

He reminded listeners that up to January 1, 1936, approximately $1,000,000,000 had been paid on 6,900,000 contracts, an average of about $145 per contract. Complete records were kept by county committees of payments received, and names of persons who received large payments are "open secrets" in the various States, he said.

Soviet-Mongol Pact Protested by China

Nanking, China, April 7 (AP).—China, protesting to Moscow, announced tonight she would under no circumstances recognize the pact of mutual assistance between Soviet Russia and Outer Mongolia, signed March 12.

The Chinese national government, which claims Outer Mongolia as a portion of China, disclosed it is forwarding a formal protest to Russia.

Following the foreign office's announcement, the Japanese consulate disclosed it had informed the national government today that Japan is giving "close attention" to the Soviet-Mongolian pact.

No End Of Books

Naughty Words.

WILL ROGERS used to receive a fair number of votes, written into the ballot, at Congressional elections. But this is a highly conservative country, and nothing came of the amiable gesture. Now England, on the other hand—"staid, stodgy, and traditional" as we believe it to be—has delighted to elect an out-and-out humorist to Parliament. At the November elections the Oxford University voters chose A. P. Herbert, staff member of Punch, and the genial author of such works as "The Water Gypsies" and "Ballads for Broadbrows," for a seat in the House of Commons. But if you consider this an innocuous event, you are mistaken.

Mr. Herbert, like most humorists, indeed, bears a Lance in a Cause. In his pre-election letter, after sage and racy remarks on empire and marriage law reform, and after setting down his platform on agriculture—"I know nothing about agriculture"—he comes to his cherished topic. He writes of education: "I have recently published an education work against the corruption of the English language. From my place in the House of Commons I shall be able to keep a close watch upon one of the chief centers of mischief."

That is fair enough warning to the honorable M. P.'s.

* * * *

BECAUSE Mr. Herbert means what he says. In the pages of Punch he has been conducting a "Word War," fighting with lusty strokes of the battle-ax against the diplomats, M. P.'s, newspapermen, orators and citizens in general who commit, ignorantly and incessantly, mayhem upon the King's English. Beside me is the book into which this has been gathered—Mr. Herbert's "What a Word!" (Doubleday Doran, $2.) And in it he declares "a new and ruthless word war," and invites "all lovers of good words to buckle on their dictionaries and enter the fight."

* * * *

TO be sure, in the course of American reading I have not had Mr. Herbert's opportunity to shiver and froth at the mouth over such barbarisms as "redecontamination," "deratization" (the killing of rats), "stockists" (salesmen of), "diarize" (to enter in a diary), or "lovelify" (to make lovely). But these have a certain charm, like old cheese, from excess of badness.

No, the naughty words which Mr. Herbert would exhort both his countrymen and us to avoid are those on the border-line—perched on the wall of common usage when they should, by all rights, be tumbled over backward into "jungle English."

Do you say "the plan intrigues me"—"she is an intriguing girl"—"I contacted him yesterday"—"it transpired that the ship had already gone"—"a steak dinner climaxed the day?"

Or are you a Government official who would translate the beginning of the Shorter Catechism, which runs, "My duty toward my neighbor is to love him as myself, and to do to all men as I would they should do unto me," into this sort of ponderous wordiness, "In connection with my co-citizens a general standard of mutual good will and reciprocal non-aggression is obviously incumbent upon me."

Or are you a business man who fills his correspondence with the wheezy old phrases: "Yours of the 5th inst. received and contents duly noted . . . beg to advise . . . further favors . . . immediate attention . . . write to us as per copy of letter inclosed . . . beg to remain?" If you fall into any of this, you had better go into hiding from Mr. Herbert and his word warriors.

* * * *

THE newspaper uses of "amazing," "sensation," "issue," "bid" (this means only to put up a sum of money in competition), "rush" (patients seem always to be "rushed"—dragged forcibly and violently—to the hospital!), and "identified with" (meaning associated with), etc., etc., come in for some hearty tub-thumping from Mr. Herbert. What, I wonder, would he think of that private code used by Variety, the theatrical paper, which will run a headline, "Legit Tops Stem B. O.," meaning, "Playhouses of the legitimate drama lead in Broadway box-office receipts."

In all this matter of decent English, Mr. Herbert acts as a vigorous outrunner for that best of all books on taste in language, H. W. Fowler's "Modern English Usage." But, being a humorist, he has a grand and lively time in the fray.

I hope to be told Mr. Herbert's remarks when he rises in the House of Commons and chastises a fellow-member for using some such linguistic nonsense as, "My opponent is sabotaging in advance the issue of peace drawn on a collective-security-system basis against authoritarian governments."

believed to have been killed by Nazis for revenge.

Most of the recent smuggling has occurred through mountain passes in the vicinity of Innsbruck.

The governments of Austria and Czechoslovakia have been co-operating to check the movement, without success.

Austrian military authorities were content they could put down any internal Nazi outbreak unless the revolutionaries were aided by Germany.

Despite promised military assistance by Italy, the government feared that their combined forces would be able to hold out only a few weeks against a German invasion.

Austria, it was understood, will feel out the western European powers on their attitude in event of a German Nazi drive against Austria.

France Keeps 175,000 Troops On Active Duty

Army Conscripts Will Not Leave Service April 15 As Scheduled.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 7.—France, preliminary to delicate diplomatic negotiations at Geneva, today ordered 175,000 army conscripts, whose military service was due to expire on April 15, held in active service until further orders.

This decree, issued by the ministry of war, affects a number totaling about half of the nation's regular peacetime army.

At the same time Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden of Great Britain sought to reconcile Franco-British differences over the treatment of Germany and Italy, differences that some officials feared might split a session of the League of Nations opening tomorrow.

Flandin, with a French plan to "punish" Germany in his pocket, met Eden at the Geneva train and told him sanctions against Italy must be abolished or imposed upon Germany.

Pressure Seen.

Officials here, however, expressed belief Eden would seek to increase pressure against Italy and would ignore Germany's violation of the Locarno Treaty by remilitarizing the Rhineland.

The extension of soldiers' service is intended to keep the army as large as possible in the face of Hitler's Rhineland troops.

League Gets Evidence.

London, April 7 (AP).—Evidence which convinced the British that Italy was using poison gas in her war with Ethiopia has been turned over to the League of Nations for consideration by the "Committee of Thirteen."

This was learned tonight from a high source shortly after Anthony Eden, foreign secretary, departed for Geneva to attend the committee session.

The evidence, which Sir Sidney Barton, British minister to Ethiopia, cabled to his government last week, came from various international sources whose neutral observations the British claimed to be unimpeachable.

Tax Plan

chairman of the chamber's committee on Federal finance, complained Congress is "running us ragged" with its fifth tax bill in four years, and Roy C. Osgood, vice president of the First National Bank of Chicago, admonished that proposed corporation earnings taxes will curtail credit extensions between business firms and lessen the stability of dividend payments.

Completing the solid front of business opposition, three other chamber spokesmen assailed the tax plan as unworkable and likely to impose severe penalties upon business—Ellsworth C. Alvord, former Treasury official, now practicing law here; H. B. Fernald, New York tax accountant, and Raymond H. Berry, Detroit attorney.

Alvord, who once served as a legislative draftsman for Congress, said the new tax program will create greater inequalities, serious inequities and unjustifiable discriminations.

Predicts Discrimination.

"Discriminating and excessive penalties will be imposed upon taxpayers by reason of circumstances entirely beyond their control," Alvord said. "Double and multiple taxation must result. The proposal is utterly impractical and unworkable."

Chamber witnesses faced the committee amid a partisan cross-fire of questioning by members, for and against the bill. Budget Director Bell had confronted a similar onslaught at morning and afternoon hearings. On the insistence of Republican and Democratic members, avid for campaign facts, Bell agreed to prepare for the record a veritable textbook of information on New Deal finance, with comparative figures on the Hoover Administration.

First of the chamber spokesmen, Clausen, said witnesses had been handicapped by the committee rule limiting testimony to the subcommittee tax report. He said the program "does not pretend to balance the budget—not even the regular budget," and will not produce amounts of additional revenue estimated by the Treasury.

Clausen, heavy-set, gray-haired farm implement manufacturer, said the committee proposals not only will have seriously depressing effects upon the so-called capital goods industries, but the mere announcement of the plan already has had some depressing effects. The burden of his argument, however, was directed at the rapidly accumulating public debt.

Says Surpluses Made Jobs.

"There has been presented no fiscal program which shows a determined purpose to balance the national budget by combining a substantial reduction of expenditures with a broad-gauged tax proposal," he told the committee.

"If we assume the enactment of the committee's recommendations, the country faces what seems to us an impossible situation because there is no tax plan that can be contrived to meet the present and increasing rate of government expenditures."

Contending large corporate surpluses had enabled industry to provide at least 1,300,000 more depression jobs than could possibly have been supplied without them, he declared the new tax proposals would find an impact "in every economic relationship from the worker to the consumer and the general public."

Sees Greater Complexities.

Illustrative of the "tax liabilities" heaped on the country in the last 4 years, he named the revenue acts of 1932, 1934, and 1935; the social security act with its ultimate toll of 6 per cent on the pay rolls of employes, "and now the proposed revenue act of 1936."

The corporate earnings tax proposed by the Ways and Means tax sub-committee he said not only would present grave administrative difficulties, but would increase tax legislation by adding to tax "complexities and not simplification." Clausen called it a "gamble" with revenues, and "a prescription worse than the disease."

The program would raise the peaks of Federal revenue in years of prosperity and deepen the valleys in years of depression.

Vice President Osgood of the First National Bank of Chicago challenged tax schedules based on the supposition that 30 per cent of corporate earnings is normally withheld for reserves.

Over the ten-year period from 1924 to 1933 he asserted the average net earnings retained by corporations reporting net income was 32.1 per cent, but the amount retained in individual years varied from 5.3 per cent to 50.8 per cent, and in tax payments would fluctuate accordingly.

Denying the charge that dividends were wrongfully withheld during nine years, 1922 to 1930, "the most prosperous years in our history," Osgood offered figures showing that all of the undistributed net income in that period was wiped out by the deficit of four years, and $9,700,000,000 of previously accumulated revenue was wiped out also.

How to Save $1,000,000,000?

Budget Director Bell, black-haired, stocky, and so youthful-appearing that it was a subject of committee comment, led the list of witnesses before the committee yesterday, and was questioned on everything from how to save $1,000,000,000 to the probable Republican nominee for President. Mild-mannered, but a willing witness, Bell dodged many questions of an obvious political nature, but agreed to supply a volume of information for the record concerning a broad range of Federal finance.

He denied there were two Federal budgets, an ordinary budget and an extraordinary budget. The Government is required by law to have only one budget, he said, pointing out, however, that there were "extraordinary" expenditures, and these had unbalanced the budget.

He said that if bonus appropriations were included, the public debt would reach $34,500,000,000 by June 30, but would not venture to say how far in the future the payoff would come.

Asked for Record Data.

Pointing out that ordinary expenditures were estimated at $5,649,781,000 for the 1937 fiscal year, an increase of more than $2,000,000,000 over the $3,626,723,000 estimated for the present year, he blamed much of the increase on Government action.

He was unable to estimate the public debt as of March 1, 1933, just before the Roosevelt Administration rode into power, but said that as of April 3, 1936, it stood at $31,479,000,000.

When Republicans bombarded him with questions on the spending of various Government agencies and bond issues outstanding on which the Government has guaranteed principal and interest, Bell said it would take him about 10 days to gather the data, but he would do it.

Dramatic Session.

The ousting of the first President of the second Spanish republic came under dramatic circumstances in the heavily guarded Gortez. It followed one of the most tense debates of many years in which the best orators either defended or attacked the republic's leader.

Political hatreds, developed during the republic's five years of life, flared frequently and more than once shouts and cries held up the speeches while Martinez Barrio, presiding, called for order.

The situation presented a paradox as the president's former allies united to vote him out while Rightists and Monarchists sought to save him.

In the Left camp that voted against him were men who only a few months ago were in exile or jail for participation in the October revolt.

Charges that the president was seeking to sabotage the development of a "republican revolution" lay behind the ouster, while bitterness stored by the bloody stamping out of the 1934 revolt also was a vital factor.

Headed Communications.

Interim President Martinez Barrio is a former minister of communications and also was minister of the interior under Premier Lerroux. He became head of the Republican Union Party when it was formed in 1934 by a combination of the Radical Democratic Party factions and the Radical Socialist Party. He belongs to a moderate wing of the new Left front.

The procedure for election of a new President provides that a number of electors equal to the actual number of deputies shall be chosen by a popular vote. These electors, in collaboration with the deputies, will elect a President for a term of six years.

Politicians, Believed Object of Plot, Escape as Car Remains on Track.

Vera Cruz, Mexico, April 7.—A desperate attempt to kill State of Vera Cruz political leaders was blamed by authorities tonight for the bombing of a railway bridge and wrecking of the Vera Cruz-Mexico City train which resulted in the death of at least 13 persons and injury to 18 others.

The politicians themselves were unharmed. Soldiers searched a wide area for the bombers.

A conclusion that political enemies of one or all of the three candidates for the gubernatorial nomination—Col. Eduardo Hernandez Chazaro, chief of the presidential staff of former President Pascual Ortiz Rubio Ochoa Zamudio and Dr. Guillermo Padilla—plotted the attack was tentatively reached by authorities.

A search for other victims was continued tonight among the mass of twisted and charred steel where pullman cars were plunged into a 40-foot ravine last night.

Victims identified included five passengers, five members of the train crew and two other employes of the British operated railway. No foreigners were believed aboard.

Partially interrupted communications prevented announcement of a definite list of the dead, but official messages indicated the number would be much less than the 50 originally feared.

A detachment of troops commanded by Gen. Heriberto Jara, in charge of the Vera Cruz zone, reported it found in the wreckage definite evidence that the bombing was a carefully planned attempt to kill the politicians.

The engine, petroleum car, mail and express cars and the first two pullmans plunged through the wrecked bridge 40 feet to the bottom of the ravine.

The politicians and others immediately sprang from the car, drawing their pistols in anticipation of an attack, but the bombers fled after exploding the charge.

As the petroleum car crashed on top of the engine, flames shot up and quickly enveloped the five wrecked cars.

Host Peter Borras Insists on Highest Standard; Spot Has History.

By Chanticleer.

The Madrillon is celebrating its sixteenth birthday anniversary this week. And the sixteenth year finds the Madrillon still placing the emphasis on food. Innovations have come and gone as the years have passed—dancing with dining, floor shows, repeal, competition and hazards. But throughout the years, Host Peter Borras has kept faith with his original pledge and ideal: to keep Washington on the culinary map.

The emphasis is not entirely Spanish although a bit of history has been made within its walls. Manuel Quezon and his determined band of patriots hatched the Philippine independence over the Madrillon's steaming puchero; the Cuban anti-Machados plotted the downfall of the tyrant over its succulent paella, and now the deposed politicos solace themselves in the same atmosphere with the same dishes. And, too, the last royalist Spanish Ambassador lunched with friends on Steak Alphonse XIII when word of that monarch's abdication came.

But for this week. There's the usual free flowers and cake for patrons; a heady bubbling vintage at incredibly low price; horse play with Host Borras making his first appearance as a feature on his own floor show, when, serenaded by the Brusiloffians and presented with a birthday cake, the customers call loudly for a "Speech."

Then there's a premiere of Concert Maestro Ralon's waltz; Brusiloff's famous birthday serenade, including "Paradise Lost" and "Tupinumba," with lyrics by Borras. And the "Militaria" and "Symphony in Rhythm" dances with original music by Carlos, of the team of Lorraine and Carlos, and their thrilling Apach finale.

Perhaps the most gratifying reflection of Pete Borras this week is the faithfulness with which world travelers return, when in Washington, to the Madrillon, where the menu runs the gamut of human knowledge from ravioli and spaghetti to the delicacies of less widely advertised native dishes.

Oh, yes. In offering Washington's congratulations to Borras, let's add a word to Chef Maggio—the fellow who upholds the traditions of the kitchen so excellently.

It's an "Easter Parade Revue" at the Lotus this week, with eight of Broadway's dancing daughters composing the flower parade setting off Manno and Stafford, in ball room varieties and a special Harlem carioca; Bobby Del Rio in a novelty act introducing his doll, Rita, and his accordian; the Aurette Sisters, musical comedy team—and the members of the home team: Judy Ellington, Bill Strickland's Capitolians, Al Norton and others.

It was not so long ago that Washington wasn't acquainted with the festive words "Bublitchki," "Chardush" and "Tzigane." But that's all changed now, thanks to Helen Hamilton, the Russian Troika's owner-manager-hostess. In fact, you hear the tired businessman these days whistling these gypsy melodies over their morning mail—and society matrons include borstch and pirojski on their menus. Incidentally, the Troika's new revues are now topping the season.

It was two or three weeks ago that Alma and Roland dropped into Maryland Club Gardens to demonstrate their dancing wares and the patrons apparently just can't get their fill. New numbers, costumes and ultra-modern arrangements never seem to run dry—and the prospects for more new one are good. The originals were lost in the Pittsburgh flood waters. Jimmy Harris and his orchestra for dancing.

Marion Wilkins and Jack Walters are back at the Shoreham ballroom—one of their favorite dancing places. They're just back from an extended engagement at Coral Gables' Miami Biltmore. And they do say that in all their travels they have yet to find a better orchestra leader than the Shoreham's Barnee. (You may take a bow, Prof. Breeskin!) Also this week: Bankoff and Cannon, typed as "exquisitely funny," and Jayne Whitney, who has been vocalizing with Buddy Rogers and his orchestra in Florida. She's a Leesburg, Va., discovery.

Little Kitty Simons, the Ambassador Hi-Hat's singing star, went horseback riding Sunday—and regretted it Monday and Tuesday. The jolly Hawaiians who provide the musical background for Kitty's vocalizing hadn't gone riding and they were in humor for the "hottest" sort of music.

One of the most handsome bars in these precincts—at Brinkley's, the Southeast thirst-quenching spot . . . Jack and Roy remain at the Mayfair . . . Sammy Marks is now at Ramon's—pianist and conductor. The band plays for dancing Sunday nights and Sammy entertains at the piano week nights. You'll remember Sammy Marks from his Club Habana days. It was he who composed Moe Baer's Habana theme—"Moody."

Speaking of the Habana, the new team of Dorothy and Gilbert add a bit of upper-crusty flavor this week. Dorothy (Young) is a niece of Owen D. Young and Gilbert's papa is king of the silk scanties industry. Music now under the personal direction of Host Guy Scott—and that means he leads the band, too.

Taylor and Cook at the Dude Ranch this week in acrobatic, toe tap and eccentric numbers. Watch for a big birthday party at this suburban spot soon. . . . Tommy Dorsey will be guest at the Washington Swing Club's jam on May 17.

Marshall and Inez have been held over at the Heigh-Ho Club this week and are featuring a "Gay Nineties" number. Unique tribute to Pete Macias's place: the band plays now until 4 a. m. Saturday nights because the customers want to stay that long—and in the face of no drinks after midnight! . . . Herschel Martin, of the team of Martin and Virginia, now headlining the La Paree supper show, is hoping to be as well known as a dancer as he has been as an athlete. He was an all-American fullback from Missouri in 1928 and 1929. He's played ball with the Chicago Cardinals—and now turns to baseball with a contract from the Brooklyn Dodgers. But Virginia says he wouldn't look well dancing with a broken collarbone!

Here and There With the Supper Clubs

The most intriguing announcement to come to this desk in many a day arrived a few minutes ago from New York. It says that the suggestion Leopold Stokowski made to Bing Crosby some time ago, when the distinguished conductor was a guest on Crosby's program, will be carried out, to-wit: Crosby will sing with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

The novel concert will originate in Hollywood and will be offered as a regular period in the "Music Hall" series of Thursday night shows. The date has been set for April 30.

N. B. C.'s largest studios will be required for the program. In one Crosby and his "Music Hall" cast will be established; in the other, Stokowski and the Philadelphia Orchestra. Crosby will carry on the program from his studio, hurrying to Stokowski's studio for his solo to the accompaniment of what is probably the best known of symphonies. Indications now are that Bing will sing a popular ballad. Which, it seems to me, as it should be. If Crosby is to sing with the Philadelphia Orchestra, he should stick to his last.

Bing reports: "I'm looking forward to the thrill of my life. I've always wanted to sing with a symphony." Stokowski says: "Bing Crosby's appearance with the Philadelphia symphony wil make interesting history. I am proud to have the great crooner appear with us and I think the public will be thrilled."

SOME random postettes today:

Interior Department employes had visions of a day or so of involuntary leave yesterday when fire trucks clanged to a halt at the F street entrances and firemen trundled thick hoses into the building. A piece of equipment in the photographic laboratory of Geological Survey is reported to have upset, causing a little fire, clouds of smoke, slight damage and lots of excitement.

A. This new vegetable breeding laboratory, the first of its kind in the world, has been established by the Department of Agriculture and 13 co-operating States near Charleston, S. C. The purpose of the laboratory, says Dr. E. C. Auchter, assistant chief of Plant Industry, is to breed high-quality disease-resistant vegetables adapted especially to the Southern States. Dr. B. L. Wade has been put in charge. Materials produced there will be tested in all the co-operating States (Virginia, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Louisiana, Kentucky, Arkansas, Texas, and the Carolinas). Vegetable varieties from this and other countries will be used, and expeditions now are en route to India, Persia, and Turkey to obtain hardy and disease-resistant vegetables not found in the United States. The laboratory was set up under authority of the Bankhead-Jones act passed last June by Congress.

Gist Blairs Open Home To Public

Landmark to Be Viewed on April 21 and 22; Built in 1824.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Garner Will Act As Patronesses.

The historic home of Maj. and Mrs. Gist Blair at 1651 Pennsylvania avenue, which stands in the middle of the block, surrounded by old residences which have been converted into offices, will be open to the public for the first time on April 21 and 22, from 2 until 6 o'clock, under the auspices of the District of Columbia committee of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation.

The house, built in 1824, has been the home of the Blairs for more than 100 years, and is filled with rare heirlooms, portraits, silver, glass and furnishings which tell a story of each generation.

Maj. Blair, who is interested in the restoration of Stratford, the birthplace of Robert E. Lee, is the grandson of Francis Preston Blair, who offered the command of the United States Army to Gen. Lee in the little room on the right of the entrance of this house. Gen. Lee wrote later that he understood this proffer was made at the instance of President Lincoln.

Francis Preston Blair was the editor of the Globe and was a member of the powerful "Kitchen Cabinet" at the time of President Jackson. He was considered such a powerful influence, his enemies circulated a picture of him with his two sons, which they entitled "The Wickedest Family in the World." This picture may now be seen in the room at the right of the entrance.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Garner, who are both particularly interested in the association of this house with the great Southern general of the Civil War, and in an earlier period with Andrew Jackson, have accepted invitations to be patronesses for the opening of the Blair house.

The committee in charge includes Mrs. Louis S. Greene, chairman; Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., Mrs. John W. Burke, Mrs. McCook Knox, Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, Mrs. Harry S. Venn and Miss Peyton Hawes.

The members of the District of Columbia committee are Mrs. Cazenove Lee and the following members of the board: Mrs. Francis G. Addison, jr., Mrs. Pierre Gaillard, Mrs. John Minor, Mrs. Morgan Beach, Mrs. C. Beatty Moore, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., Mrs. Carter Glass, Mrs. George M. Morris, Mrs. Stephen Bonsal, Mrs. Cary T. Care of Feeble Minded Is Told by Miss Sehon

Vineland Home Secretary, Here for Visit, Talks of Cheery Atmosphere.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THOSE WHO VISUALIZE a school for the feeble-minded as a gloomy, hopeless institution, half home and half prison, should have a chance to talk with Miss Clarrette Sehon, executive secretary of the Training School at Vineland, N. J., who arrived in Washington yesterday.

She came to make final arrangements for Pearl Buck's lecture tonight at Constitution Hall for the benefit of the Vineland Research Laboratory, which delves into the causes of mental retardation and the development of sub-normal individuals.

Yesterday morning, half an hour after she arrived, Miss Sehon sat in her room at the Dodge Hotel and described an institution where the motto is "Happiness First!"—a school created for persons who in a normal world would be lost as in a London fog; where each pupil is given a chance to develop according to his mental capacity, and to benefit by each new discovery regarding the care and treatment of mentally deficient individuals.

MISS CLARRETTE SEHON.

Atmosphere Is Happy.

"The Training School at Vineland is the most cheerful place I ever saw," said Miss Sehon. "Persons who think it is a depressing place should visit it. There is no school quite like it in the world, and none—I am sure—in which there is a happier atmosphere."

She wanted to go on discussing Vineland, to tell of its establishment, its founder—Olin Garrison—and its present director, Dr. Edward R. Johnstone. She started to outline recent discoveries in the research laboratory, to elaborate on the work of its director, Dr. E. A. Doll. But the interviewer, already more interested in Miss Sehon herself, than in what she was talking about, urged her to tell more about her own career, and how she came to be on the staff of the institution which has for its motto what obviously embodies her outlook on life—"Happiness First."

Her eyes twinkled, and a soft smile lifted the corners of her mouth. She declined to admit her personal philosophy is entirely the same as the motto at the Training School, but she agreed to tell something of how she arrived at her present position. "Maybe the fact I was born an orphan had something to do with it," she chuckled. "I was an orphan, even though I had parents," she went on. "My father was head of the Kentucky Children's Home Society, the largest institution in that State for destitute boys and girls. I grew up knowing a good deal about handicapped individuals."

Reached In Roundabout Way.

Her present work did not directly follow her early contact with the orphans' home, however. "I arrived at it in the most roundabout of ways," she said. "Yet it seems almost everything I did served in respect for what I am doing now."

After attending college in her home State, and later in Chicago and New York, she directed recreational activity in a private school for a time. Then she enlisted for war work and was assigned to Russia before it was discovered she was too young to take the position. A Y. W. C. A. worker in Europe after the war, she spent a year training native French girls who had never before had to earn a living. A year in Italy doing the same type of work followed; then she spent some time in Czechoslovakia directing recreational activity for girls.

"I enjoyed that work ever so much," said Miss Sehon. "Might have been doing it yet if I hadn't decided to come back to America to take a job as Y. W. C. A. secretary for Burlington County, N. J."

She left that to conduct a campaign in her native State to raise funds for the institution her father had been in charge of for many years. The half a million dollars that resulted from this went to building the up-to-date home for children at Lyndon, Ky.

Joined Health Play Group.

That feat finished, Miss Sehon set out on another career, a more dramatic one. She joined a company in Philadelphia, which put on health plays throughout Pennsylvania. "I had three years of writing, directing and acting in plays," she said. "Then I went to Vineland."

After seven years there, Miss Sehon is convinced, "nothing could be more interesting, more satisfactory than having a part in work for individuals who cannot help themselves. Boys and girls in the training school at Vineland are not unfortunates. They are happy because they are in an environment designed especially for them and they are safely cared for outside a world where they might be victims of unscrupulous individuals, where they might fall into crime, through no fault of their own."

MARY HAWORTH Says:

To Offer Advice on Family Affairs of Persons Who Have Not Asked Advice Is to Be a Busybody.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The problem I am about to relate is not my own, but that of someone very dear to me. Again, it is an unhappy marriage. The girl was brought up in a large, rather poor Christian family, and is one of the most unselfish girls I have ever known. She always appreciated the little things in life that others take for granted—such as warm clothing, sufficient food, friends and affection. She was one of the happiest persons I have ever known. There was only one other man with whom she thought herself in love, and it took her years to forget him.

Mary Haworth.

Now, as to the man she married: His family has always been rather hard up, in about the same circumstances as her family. They met in college, both working their way through, and their romance developed mostly through correspondence, seeing each other only now and then. It was not a hasty affair, continuing over several years.

* * * *

Before the honeymoon was over his attitude had changed, and when he learned she was going to have a baby he tried to make her leave him. Although she was always the most popular girl in her family, he made her believe herself dumb, dull and homely. Had her family known of his attitude they would have made it financially possible for her to leave him, but she is a person not easily discouraged or defeated. As a result of his treatment she almost lost her life. When it came time for the baby to be born he insisted she leave town. It was at this time she confided in me, writing to ask for a little money. She was desperate to get her mind off things, and he withheld money for even such things as stamps to write to her family, or for newspapers or magazines.

* * * *

By a strange quirk, after the baby was born, he simply worships the baby, but has never changed toward his wife. He has always held a good position, and never denies himself clothing, trips or good times, while his wife wears cast-off coats given her by someone else. She is expected to be the old woman at home, thankful for a roof over her head. Those of her family who know the situation have written her sound advice, and hold the conviction that if she is to keep her sanity she should leave him. I know now that not only he but his entire family worship money, although they have never had any. He is forever embarrassing her by not paying their obligations, such as the doctor's bill, now 18 months overdue.

* * * *

Why she puts up with him I do not know, unless because she is a romantic little person with very definite ideals about marriage and just a little old fashioned. She may have her own ideas about divorce and denying her baby a father's companionship. It is my contention that she is doing wrong by letting the baby grow up under his influence. He doesn't have any friends because he uses them for a meal ticket.

* * * *

The position he holds is very good, with an exceptional salary. Yet his wife goes without butter because it is expensive. He would lose his position instantly if his superiors knew of his actions. When he is sent out of town, which is more often than not, his office calls her every other day to know if she is needing anything, and although she is often in want, she never says so. Several of us close to her have, without her knowledge, made some inquiry to get information she would need in divorcing him. It may be she is afraid her lawyer husband would get the baby.

* * * *

Even though her family is back of her 100 per cent she seems incapable of handling the situation otherwise than by accepting her fate, never spending a penny and never under any circumstances mentioning money to her husband. Under such circumstances he treats her like hired help, with no affection even after a six weeks' absence. Strangely enough, he seems to have a certain regard for her family's opinion, in that he doesn't want them to know he denys her money and affection. This was proven when her mother spent a short time there. He sent $50 immediately, when previous to her arrival he had sent $10 after his wife had written numerous letters begging for money to pay the grocery bill. Out of respect for the girl's feelings her family gives her husband no inkling of their true dislike of him.

* * * *

It is plain to see these two individuals had, at best, much to overcome in adjusting themselves to each other, but I am confident that the girl, although not the most practical-minded person in the world, is the sort who can be happy on very little. Most important of all to her is a little love and affection. If you have any suggestion as to what her family could do, or if you have any advice for her, it will be appreciated. Very sincerely. ANNONYMOUS.

No Advice to Give.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I have no advice for the girl for the good and sufficient reason that she has not asked for any. To offer gratuitous advice in this situation, where advice has not been solicited by one or the other of the two persons most vitally concerned, is to constitute one's self a busybody and possibly a mischief maker, it seems to me.

* * * *

As one of a large family of children reared in comparative poverty this girl necessarily has been forced to stand more or less on her own feet since childhood. To a certain extent she proved her ability to do so in paying her way through college. With that measure of individual success to her credit, and as a wife and mother, she must be conceded the privilege of working out her destiny in her own way. It is not for others to assay without invitation the superficial evidence of unhappiness in her case and jump to the conclusion that the way of life to which she cleaves is lacking in spiritual satisfaction and gain; nor to take the initiative in persuading her that divorce or legal separation is the best solution of her problem.

* * * *

The most her family can do for her as matters stand is to give her the moral support of a consistently affectionate, uncritical and non-interfering interest in her welfare, and to keep themselves in readiness to help her in such ways as she may indicate she needs help. M. H.

High Fronts, Low Sides Noted in Shoe Styles

The old "high-low" bridge term may be applied to shoes this season. Designers are sponsoring a style trend toward higher fronts and lower sides. Covered insteps are achieved by built-up vamps, stand-up tongues, panels and other decorative details that sweep the eye upward. The low sides follow the inspiration of the D'Orsay pump with extremely "cut down" sides which serve to alleviate a too "closed up" effect.

Vivid Prints Favored.

CLEANERS and DYERS

"Where QUALITY Comes FIRST."

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

Ruth Dayton, 18, an orphan, wholesomely beautiful, has been hired to impersonate June Bradley, whom she greatly resembles. At first, bedazzled by June's uncle and aunt, Joseph and Clara Bradley, Ruth believes her mission is one of mercy—to comfort a dying man, June's step brother, Jim Bradley. June, she is told, is very ill and therefore cannot come to her brother. However Jim proves not to be dying—though blinded and badly hurt—in an auto accident.

June finds herself falling in love with the man whose stepsister she is pretending to be. She shares the suspicion he voices that the auto accident was deliberate, and suspects the uncle and aunt of desiring Jim's death. She attempts to go for help but finds herself a prisoner, her phone disconnected.

CHAPTER SIX.

SUNSHINE of a new day filtered through the windows and across Ruth's bed when she opened her eyes the next morning. Chiefly because she did not know what else to do she had taken Joseph Bradley's advice the night before and gone to bed. She had been certain then that she could not sleep because of terror. But she had not reckoned on the demands of her young and tired body.

She had slept soundly, not even tormented by terror-filled dreams.

Clara Bradley came tapping on the girl's door, turned the key in the lock, entered in quite friendly, jovial manner. "I let Mary go last night. I told her that you were tired and had decided that you didn't need a maid. I thought, my dear, that, after all, a maid is a superfluity in your case; that is, all of the time. Whenever you need a maid my own Bette can help you. She's served me for years. She knows my needs and she is thoroughly, shall we say, trustworthy?"

There was an emphasis to the last word that made Ruth cringe. It held a secret, implied threat.

"By the way, my dear, you are to breakfast with your brother. He's already awake and asking for you. How fortunate you didn't go away last night. It would have been foolish for you to throw away a good job like this. Positions are scarce now, you know."

"By the way," Mrs. Bradley was saying, "put on this long-sleeved negligee, will you? That bruise on your arm is going to look difficult." She tossed a soft flowered satin negligee across the bed to Ruth. "I know this will fit. It's the last word in elegance."

Street Clothes.

"I'll put on street clothes if you don't mind," Ruth said firmly.

"That blouse has short sleeves," the older woman reminded her. "Jim can't see. No one else will care. You know that the bruise is there and your—your——"

"My husband, my dear."

"Your husband knows that it's there, certainly."

"Certainly. But just the same, you'll put on the negligee. We'll not run the risk."

Ruth put on the negligee.

Down the corridor in the beautiful suite of the sick man everything seemed cheery and inviting, certainly not like part of the sinister, forbidding house this place had seemed the night before.

A dainty, bedside table had been arranged close to the sick man's bed. He was propped up slightly on his pillows. He seemed, somehow, paler than he had appeared the night before.

Ruth crossed swiftly to his side, kissed him, patted his hand. "Are you better?" she asked hopefully.

"Much better now that you're here."

"June accepted the invitation right away to have breakfast with you, Jim," Mrs. Bradley purred. "My, how glad we all are that you're getting better. You two dear children visit and call me if there is anything you want."

She padded away contentedly—just a kindly appearing, middle-aged woman. Ruth wondered if she had just imagined Clara Bradley's eyes, blazing with anger, her voice low, intense in rage as she had heard it the night before.

Ruth searched Jim's face anxiously. He had settled back quietly. It startled the girl to see that Jim's face against the whiteness of the pillows was almost gray. Did she just imagine that his breath came more quickly? "I'll come back," she whispered, bending close to him and feeling again that strange, wild beating of the heart that came to her at the mere touch of his hand. "Just as soon as the doctor lets me, I'll come back."

"Please do," the sick man said.

In the corridor Joseph Bradley joined his make-believe niece. He was feeling quite himself, it seemed. Morning had restored all his affable self-possession. He rubbed his hands together, briskly, jovially. "I trust you slept well, June."

She stopped abruptly, faced him with determination.

"As well have this thing out now as any time."

"As you will, my dear, as you will." Her anger did not disturb his calm in the least.

"I'm leaving here right now." She was sorry that her voice trembled. It did not sound so haughty nor determined as she wanted it to sound. "I knew perfectly well that you locked me into my room last night. I heard the key turn in the lock. I heard Mrs. Bradley unlock the door when she let me out this morning."

"Why, my dear, how astute you are; really quite clever." His voice was mocking, almost an insult.

"I'm leaving right now."

"If you'll pardon me, June," and now his voice was mildly reproachful, "that's rather stupid of you. 'I'm leaving—I'm leaving—I'm leaving,' it seems to me that's about all I hear you talk of lately. Well, why don't you leave?"

Ruth faced him breathlessly. "You mean—you mean that I actually could go?"

He laughed. "Well, try it. See how far you get." He watched the expression of her face turn from hope to that wild fear it had shown the night before.

"You mean, then, that I cannot go?"

"That's exactly what I do mean, my dear niece. At last you are showing a bit of your cleverness. You're staying right here in this house. There isn't a ghost of a chance for you to get away."

"I'll appeal to the servants."

"Appeal to them if you want to."

Then her fears of the night before were not just imagined? She was actually a prisoner in this house. "You mean——"

"I mean the servants are in my employ—not Jim Bradley's. And this is the last time I'll have an argument with you.

"Really, my dear, you get on my nerves. You've been hired here to do a piece of work. You're being well paid to do it. If you behave yourself, there is no reason why you should not be quite free to go, say within another week."

The horror of his insinuation riveted her attention. "Free? You are insinuating——"

"I am not insinuating anything. I am merely saying that when your pseudo brother is well or—dead—I'll have no further need of your services."

Unusual Cake Recipes Given In Post Contest

LAST week's contest for cake recipes brought in so many entries that it was difficult selecting the six most outstanding ones. Naturally even some of the very best recipes had to be eliminated because there were duplicates.

The final selection consists of a group of cakes—some unusual—but among them the judges hope you will find your favorite. Some of the prize-winning recipes are printed below and others appear elsewhere on the food pages. These six prize-winning recipes will be entered in the final judging to determine the winners of the four grand prizes.

If your recipes did not win a prize in the cake contest, try your luck again this week. You will find further details of this week's contest in a box on one of the food pages.

Honorable mention has been given a group of recipes received in last week's contest. These recipes will appear in the Saturday food page.

Spice Cake With Raisin Filling.

½ cup shortening
1½ cups sugar
2 eggs
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup sour milk
½ teaspoon soda

2 tablespoons corn starch
½ cup boiling water
2 tablespoons lemon juice and rind

Chocolate Angel Cake.

11 egg whites (1¼ cups)
1¼ cups fine granulated sugar (sifted)
¾ cup cake flour (sifted 5 times before measuring)
¾ cup cocoa (sift flour and cocoa 5 times)
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon lemon extract.

Beat egg whites slightly. Add cream of tartar and beat until stiff. Add the sifted sugar gradually, beating constantly. Fold in the flour, cocoa and salt, which have been sifted together. Add flavoring. Pour into a tube pan and bake in a moderate oven (325 F.) 50 to 60 minutes. Turn upside down on a cake cooler and let stand until cake drops out.

Almond Icing.

¼ pound butter creamed
2 cups confectioner's sugar
3 tablespoons hot milk
1 cup almonds chopped

Blanch nuts and brown in olive oil, but do not salt them. When first three ingredients have been well blended, add almonds to mixture. Cake should be cool before icing is applied.

My Favorite White Cake.

(A 2-layer cake)

¾ cup butter
2 cups sugar
2½ cups cake flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
3 egg whites
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream the butter thoroughly and add the sugar gradually. Cream together until very light and fluffy. Sift the cake flour once before measuring. Measure, add the baking powder and salt, and sift together. Add this to the creamed mixture alternately with the milk. (Be sure to add some of the flour before adding any of the milk.) Fold in the egg whites and the vanilla. Bake in two greased and floured 9-inch layer cake pans in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 25 to 30 minutes. Cool and ice.

Frosting.

1½ cups sugar
2 egg whites
⅓ cup water
1 orange
2 cups grated coconut
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Add water to sugar and boil until it spins a thread. Pour slowly over stiffly beaten egg whites and beat until thick enough to spread. Add vanilla and spread on cooled cake, but do not put layers together.

Mix the coconut (the moist canned coconut may be used) with the pulp, juice and grated rind of one large seedless navel orange and sweeten. When the frosting on the cake has begun to set, but is not hard, put this orange-coconut mixture into it and put the layers together. This gives a mixture of textures and flavors that is unique.

Sugar Helpful In Using Honey

Best Results for Sweetening Obtained by Mixture in Cake-Making.

AS YOU perhaps know, honey is one of the oldest known sweetenings for cakes and like confections. Frequently the best results are obtained if part sugar and part honey are used.

This rule has been applied in the following prize-winning cake recipe submitted in The Post's contest last week.

Honey Chocolate Cake.

½ cup shortening
¾ cup sugar
½ cup strained honey
2 eggs
1¾ cups flour
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup thick sour milk
2 squares chocolate, melted

Cream shortening, add sugar gradually and cream thoroughly. Add honey gradually and blend completely. Add well-beaten eggs. Blend in melted chocolate. Sift flour once before measuring. Sift together flour, soda and salt three times. Add to creamed mixture alternately with sour milk. Mix well and pour into well-greased and floured pan and bake 45 to 50 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.). Bake in an 8-inch square pan, 2 inches deep. When cake is cool, split through the center to make 2 layers. Put together with marshmallow filling. Spread chocolate coating over top of cake to within about 1 inch of edge. Spread almond roca frosting over sides of cake and over the top rim not covered by the chocolate coating.

Marshmallow Filling.

Cut 12 marshmallows in quarters and soak in ¼ cup milk until softened.

Chocolate Coating.

Mix two tablespoons cream and 2 tablespoons sugar together and bring to a boil. Pour into an enamel bowl containing 1 square sweet shaved chocolate and ¾ square bitter chocolate, shaved. Stir until entirely melted and cool. If necessary, thin with a little additional cream until icing is easy to spread.

Almond Roca Frosting.

½ cup butter
½ cup strained honey
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1-3 teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup toasted almonds coarsely chopped

Combine butter, honey, sugar, salt and cinnamon and cook until it boils up well. Remove from heat. Beat until mixture begins to thicken (about 5 or 10 minutes) and add almonds. Beat until a taffy-like sticky consistency so it will cling to cake. If the icing stiffens before you have finished putting it on cake, heat slightly and proceed.

Hidden Kitchen Newest Scheme In Hotel Living

"Invisible Cabinet" to Fit in Suites Turns Rooms Into Apartments.

By the Associated Press.

visible kitchen," which converts an ordinary hotel suite into a town apartment, was acclaimed today as the innkeeper's key to a rapidly expanding field of business.

"From San Francisco to New York, the big hotels are going in for residential apartments," explained Leonard Hicks, chairman of the Midwest Hotel Show, now exhibiting latest equipment for hostelries.

"It started in one of the big Chicago hotels during the depression. That concern is now opening its fourth floor to 'apartment homes' for permanent guests."

Some sort of furnishings which would permit the quick change from the usual hotel room to an apartment was needed, hotel men explained. And that's where the innovation was born.

The "invisible kitchen" is a cabinet affair, readily installed, in a suite. It conceals the ordinary fixtures and houses a stove, refrigerator and other kitchen appliances to give light-house keeping facilities on demand.

Cinnamon Toast.

Cinnamon toast is a pleasant accompaniment when canned or cooked fruit is served for dessert. Canned peach or pear halves with cinnamon toast end a meal happily.

Hot Cross Buns Are Popular in Spring Season

Holy Week Breads Find Favor and Their Use Is Prolonged.

IT IS time for hot cross buns. Originally these delicious little breads were served only on Good Friday, but now, though we save them first for the Holy Week each year, we extend their period of serving far into the spring season, for they are ever popular.

Hot cross buns have long been the delight of food lovers. Athough these delicious little cross-topped puffs have been associated with England, they are known in one form or another throughout the bread-eating world. Almost 2,000 years before Christ these sweet buns, then made of fine flour and sweetened with honey, and called "bouns," were served. But it was in England, at the famous Bun House in Chelsea, that hot cross buns reached the height of perfection. As long ago as 1712 Swift wrote in his Journal to Stella, "Are not the buns sold here in our town as the rare Chelsea buns?" So good were the Chelsea buns that English royalty and nobility for years patronized the Chelsea Bun House. And one story has it that on Good Friday of 1839 no less than 24,000 hot cross buns were sold from this famous bakeshop.

Delicious cross buns can be had at almost every bakeshop these days, or they can be made at home. Real hot cross buns are always made from fine white flour, and usually that contains raisins and some spice.

Hot Cross Buns.

1 cake compressed yeast
3 tablespoons lukewarm water
1 cup milk, scalded
1-3 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1-3 cup butter
4 cups flour
½ teaspoon cinnamon
2 eggs
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
¾ cup raisins

Soften the yeast in lukewarm water. To the hot milk add sugar, salt and butter. Let cool to lukewarm. Add 1½ cups of the flour. Beat until smooth. Add yeast. Then add the cinnamon, eggs, lemon rind and the remaining flour. Enough flour should be added to make a dough that can be handled without sticking. Cover and let rise until double in bulk. Knead down lightly, adding raisins. Divide the dough into pieces about the size of golf balls. Shape into balls. Place close together in a greased pan. (If crusty rolls are preferred, place rolls 2 inches apart.) Brush with melted butter and let rise. When half risen cut 2 gashes at right angles to form cross. When a little more than double in bulk, bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) for 20 minutes. While still warm fill gashes with white frosting.

Vegetable Combinations.

Two vegetables served together help to use leftovers. Mixed carrots and peas are fairly well known but try string beans and celery. Turnips and potatoes are particularly good if mashed together, made into patties and fried. Then there are all kinds of mixed vegetable salads, but if you want something different try Bermuda onion and sliced orange served with French dressing.

Dinner's Success Depends on Setting

By Margaret Wallace.

IT HAS been said that political and social fortunes are made and unmade about the dinner tables of Washington. Not only is it necessary for the successful hostess to use great discrimination in the assembling of a congenial list of guests, but she must also give serious thought to the appearance of her dinner table.

There are set rules for setting a table for a formal dinner. Individuality can be expressed in the selection and arrangement of flowers, choice of china, glass and silver.

Original dinner table coverings are much in vogue for formal dinners in Washington. There are some hostesses who insist that the only proper covering is a damask tablecloth. But many smart hostesses use lace banquet cloths or embroidered linen ones, with or without colored linings.

Dinner napkins are always white at formal dinner parties, no matter what kind of table covering may be used. The napkins can be handsomely embroidered. Many hostesses like the very large ones with wide hemstitched hem and with elaborate monograms.

Centerpieces of flowers are always attractive on a dinner table. Unless the hostess possesses handsome dinner table ornaments, flowers are the best selection for center pieces. Mirrors are very much in favor as part of the center decoration. Practically every dinner table plan these days includes candles. Most hostesses prefer the tall kind in low holders and without shades. Silver or glass candlelabra are also considered in good form.

One of the first rules in setting a table is to have each one of the "covers," as the places for each guest are called, exactly alike and all the same distance apart. Place plates, glasses and so forth must be just alike for all the guests.

All silver should be placed on the table in the order in which it will be used. The spoons and knives are always at the right of the place plate and the forks at the left. The oyster fork is usually placed with the knives. The spoon belongs at the outside to the right if the first course is to be a fruit cup or soup or anything that must be eaten with a spoon. Next to the spoon and nearer to the right side of the plate should be the large knife for the main course. The large fork for the main course is placed on the left side of the plate. The salad fork should be placed between the large fork and the left side of the plate. Usually dessert silver is brought in with the dessert course.

Query—I am giving a dinner party. I have a whole set of very handsome blue glass, which includes water glasses, wine glasses and finger bowls and dessert plates. Will it be proper to use these at a formal dinner? How are the water and wine glasses placed on the table. How should the finger bowls be brought in. I have a cook and a man who will serve the dinner.

Answer—Colored glass, especially if it is handsome, is quite proper for formal dinner parties today. The color scheme of the dinner table should be planned to go with it. The water glass should be placed above the large knife. The wine glasses are placed to the right of the water glass. The finger bowls should be brought in after the table is cleared and the tablecloth crumbed and the water glasses refilled. The finger bowls should be only one-fourth full of water and may have a flower or leaf floating in them. They are placed on small doilies on a dessert plate. Each guest should remove the finger bowl and doily and place them to the left on a line with the water glass. The doily should of course be under the finger bowl.

Avocado Is Delightful Meatless Appetizer

Here is a delicious meatless appetizer that will be just the tidbit to serve as first course this week for any of your fast-day dinners or luncheons:

Peel 1 large avocado and cut in six circles. Place each circle on a lettuce leaf on individual plates. Flake 1 No. ½ can of salmon which has been chilled, add 2 teaspoons lemon juice and mayonnaise, to taste. Fill the center of each circle with the mixture and serve with additional mayonnaise. This amount serves six.

Rose Geranium New Flavoring

ROSE geranium leaves, which may be purchased at any nursery or herb garden, give a delightful flavor to cakes and jellies. They can be raised right along with other herbs in the kitchen window box. All this interesting information has been brought to light by one of last week's contestants in The Post recipe contest. Below is her prize-winning recipe, in which she tells how the rose geranium leaves may be used to flavor cake.

Rose Geranium Cake.

Preliminary preparation: Wash 1 cup and 2 tablespoons of butter in cold water to remove the salt, or use sweet butter. Wrap the butter in rose geranium leaves and then in waxed paper. Chill overnight.

Ingredients:
1 cup butter (geranium flavored)
2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup milk
3 cups cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
6 egg whites

Cream the butter with 2 tablespoons of the milk. Then add 1½ cups of the sugar and cream until very light and fluffy. Beat in alternately the remainder of the milk and the flour which has been sifted with the baking powder.

Beat the egg whites until stiff, add the remaining ½ cup sugar and beat until the sugar just barely disappears. Fold the egg whites into the cake batter.

Line three layer cake pans with heavy waxed paper and grease well. Lay several washed and dried rose geranium leaves against the paper. Pour in the batter and bake in a moderate oven (365 degrees F.). Cool cake completely before removing paper and leaves.

Filling Between Layers.

Dissolve 1 cup granulated sugar in ½ cup hot water and boil rapidly to the thread stage, or 250 degrees F. Let stand two or three minutes, then pour in a stream over the stiffly beaten whites of 2 eggs, beating constantly. Continue beating till the filling is cold and thick; flavor with ¼ teaspoon almond extract.

Geranium Icing.

2 tablespoons butter (which has been chilled with geranium leaves)
1 cup confectioner's sugar
A little sweet cream
Pink food coloring

Cream the geranium flavored butter with the sifted confectioner's sugar. Add enough cream to make a spreading consistency. Flavor very delicately and tint as desired. Cover the top and sides of cake with this mixture.

Post Bridal Cooks Forget About Spice

Cannisters Given at Showers Seem to Be Lost.

One of life's minor mysteries is what becomes of the spice sets that practically every bride receives at a kitchen shower. From most of the post-bridal cooking we have tasted we suspect that these attractive and useful little jars and cannisters are put on a top shelf and forgotten.

It would be pleasant to believe that the handy tins of ground and whole spices that are now available in all grocery stores had taken the place of the spice set, but some of the flavorless meals we have eaten are against that belief. Young matrons have told us that "it costs such a lot to spice things," and that "it takes such a lot of time."

Neither of these excuses is valid, however, for the addition of the proper spice in the proper proportion is only a matter of seconds, and the result is palatability which will linger as a pleasant memory for a long time after the meal is eaten. A pinch of pepper, a sprinkling of cinnamon, a half dozen whole cloves or a teaspoon of mustard are not major items of expense, either, for spices are to be had in small cans that cost very little. Certainly a complete assortment ought to be in every kitchen, and it really doesn't matter if they are kept in the original tins or transferred to the dainty contains of the china spice set.

Easter Dinner May Be Easily Prepared Meal

By Dorothea Duncan.

EASTER starts a new season of gayety so why should any housewife spoil the very beginning of this festive time of year by spending her entire day in the kitchen preparing an elaborate dinner for her family and friends.

Easter Sunday just isn't the day to spend inside a hot kitchen. There are too many pleasures awaiting you. So why not plan your Easter dinner this year along the easy-to-prepare method and forget about the usual traditional meal. Your family will welcome the change, and you will enjoy your day because you can spend the best part of it with your family and friends.

Plan a well-balanced meal full of color and light, but make it one of those meals that is a joy to prepare as well as to eat. And how can you do it if you expect to have guests or even if you are just counting on the members of your family to be present? Naturally if you can prepare the piece de resistance the day before most of your cooking worries for Easter Sunday will be over, so why not plan to serve a baked ham.

Solves Marketing Problem.

The selection of ham for the main course of your Easter dinner will solve your marketing problems right away for you need not wait until Saturday to order the meat. It would be better if you would order it immediately and so get the best selection as to size, etc. This off your mind, and you can leisurely plan the ham accompaniments, and when Saturday comes, you will have done the most important part of your week-end marketing.

The manner in which you cook your ham will, of course, depend upon the type of ham you select. Some of the larger meat companies are so treating hams that they need no parboiling, but can be baked at once in a moderately slow oven, about 325 degrees F., for something like 25 minutes to the pound. About half an hour before the ham is done, it is removed from the oven, skinned and part of the surplus fat removed. Next the coating of brown sugar, mustard, etc., is applied and cloves are inserted, and the ham is returned to the oven to become glossy and brown.

Other hams need no soaking but must be parboiled and then baked, while the Virginia hams and some of the others prepared in the country must be soaked overnight, parboiled and then baked.

After the ham has been baked, allow it to cool, then cover with heavy waxed paper so it will not become dry and keep it in a cold place until ready to serve. If you prefer to have it served in thin, cold slices all well and good. It will taste delicious with creamed whole new potatoes and fresh asparagus tips with hollandaise sauce. Both these vegetables are easily and quickly prepared. The small new potatoes have an especially good flavor when boiled in their jackets.

A hot sauce may be served over the thin slices of ham if you prefer. Pineapple and orange sauce, hot applesauce, raisin or prune sauce are just a few of the interesting fruit accompaniments for baked ham.

Springlike Accompaniments.

Whatever you select as accompaniments for your baked ham, be sure that they are springlike in quality and easily prepared. Any of the green vegetables will be attractive. If you don't care for asparagus try French artichokes with lemon butter and parsley, potatoes, or green peas and shredded carrots, or Frenched string beans. Any of these are delicious with ham.

A piquant salad appetizer may be served as a starter for your Easter meal instead of the usual soup or fruit cocktail. Try chilled avocado balls served with lime juice, or crisp celery stalks filled with your favorite type of cheese.

If you really prefer a fruit cup, try something as simple to prepare and as refreshing as halved strawberries and fresh pineapple cubes. You will like this combination especially well if your ham is to follow with hot raisin sauce.

Dessert should be light but satisfying and no trouble to prepare, if you are following out the scheme of as little time in the kitchen as the law allows. Why not serve baker's angel cake topped with prepared chocolate sauce and a mere suggestion of whipped cream.

Cottage Cheese May Be Served In Many Ways

Dairy Product Has a High Food Value, Contains Calcium and Proteins.

IF YOU want to surprise and delight your family on Good Friday forget all about the meat substitute dishes that you have already served during the Lenten season, and turn to cottage cheese for your inspiration.

Cottage cheese is a popular dish. Every housewife knows that it can be classed as a real money saver, because it is not only inexpensive, but also there are no waste portions. Cottage cheese left over from one meal may appeal in a new and equally tempting guise at the next one.

The food value of cottage cheese is also an important factor in its favor. It contains a larger amount of protein than some meats and furnishes this material at lower cost. In addition to the food value of cottage cheese, with its liberal supply of protein and its calcium and phosphorous so essential for the bones and teeth, it is remarkably versatile and can be served in innumerable attractive ways.

Special Appeal.

It may be served in so many delicious ways that it has a unique and special appeal to housewives who like to surprise and please their families. Cottage cheese is a food which may be served as the main part of the meal, in salads too numerous to mention and as desserts such as cottage cheese pie or pudding.

But the main dish is the one which is of prime importance to the housewife on Good Friday, for two reasons: First, when meat is absent from the menu, its substitute must be adequate in food value to make up for the loss; second, it must be attractive to look at so the family will indulge with a will. It goes without saying that the concoction itself must be full of zest and flavor.

Cottage cheese meets all these requirements, so it will naturally appeal to the artistic taste of the housewife, as well as to her sense of economy.

Attractive Salad.

There are many delicious hot main dishes that use cottage cheese as a basis for their goodness. But right now when appetites are finicky it will be wise to use cottage cheese in one of its many attractive salad forms for your main Good Friday meat substitute dish. A cottage cheese salad will serve as a tonic for the lazy spring appetite.

Order a 2-pound jar of cottage cheese from your milk man or grocer today and try this delectable salad that combines spears of pineapple, slices of pimiento, dates or stuffed prunes together with a few sprigs of parsley and crisp lettuce leaves and snowy cottage cheese. This delicious salad will give you a perfect blend of flavors as well as the correct balance of proteins, minerals and vitamins so necessary to the diet at this time of the year. You will find, too, that your hot cross buns will taste especially good when served with this type of salad. The recipe for cottage cheese fish mold follows:

Cottage Cheese Fish Mold.

2 pounds cottage cheese
2 tablespoons plain gelatin
½ cup cold water
1 cup pineapple juice

Combine gelatin and water, dissolve in the pineapple juice which has been heated to the boiling point. Cool. Add mixture to cottage cheese that has been forced through a potato ricer or sieve. Pack into a greased fish mold. Chill until firm. Unmold and outline with tinted creamed cheese forced through a pastry tube. A slice of stuffed olive may be used as an eye. The salad plate is garnished with lettuce, pineapple spears, parsley and stoned dates. Mayonnaise may be served from a side dish.

Cottage Cheese and Fruit for Meatless Days

There are many interesting features about cottage cheese, but the one that pleases the housewives the most is the fact that it is a versatile food. Here we have the latest version of this snowy dairy product—a cottage cheese and pineapple salad molded in attractive fish design surrounded by crisp greens and enticing fruits. You will find it a perfect dish for your Good Friday dinner.

Sponge Drops Ideal With Fruit, Gelatin

When you serve a gelatin dessert or a dessert of stewed or canned fruits, you really need a piece of cake to round it off. For this purpose you will find that these feathery-light sponge drops are perfect—just try them.

Sponge Drops.

1-3 cup sifted cake flour
Dash of salt
1 egg and 2 egg yolks
2 egg whites
1-3 cup powdered sugar
¼ tablespoon vanilla
1 teaspoon melted butter

Sift flour once, measure, add salt, and sift together four times. Combine egg and egg yolks and beat until thick and lemon-colored. Beat egg whites stiff, add sugar gradually and continue beating until mixture stands in peaks. Fold in egg yolk mixture and vanilla. Add flour, folding in carefully; then fold in butter. Drop from teaspoon on ungreased paper. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 12 minutes. Makes 2½ dozen sponge drops.

Cheese Sauce Enhances Vegetables of Spring

Here is a cheese sauce that will enhance the flavor of the following spring vegetables: Spinach, new cabbage, Brussel sprouts, turnip greens, or asparagus. Cook the vegetables in the usual manner, drain, and then pour over them the following:

Melt 2 tablespoons of butter in a saucepan; add 4 tablespoons of flour and stir until well blended; pour on 2 cups milk and stir constantly until thickened. Then add ½ teaspoon salt, a few grains of pepper and 1½ cups Roquefort cheese and cook slowly until cheese is melted.

New Salad Dressing Adds Delicious Zest

For crisp lettuce, watercress, or endive salad, try the following dressing and see what a zestful difference it makes:

Mash 1 cup Roquefort cheese with a little salad oil. Add a bit of finely minced garlic. Add 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 2 tablespoons vinegar and enough salad oil to make 2-3 cup, including the small amount used at first. Shake well until creamy.

Delicious Cake Dessert.

½ cup butter
½ cup sugar
4 egg yolks
½ cup cake flour
4 tablespons milk
1 teaspoon baking powder
2 talespoons cake flour
¼ teaspoon salt

Cream the butter and sugar together. Separate the eggs, add the yolks, well beaten, and mix thoroughly. Add the cake flour which has been sifted before measuring, alternately with the milk. Meringue Topping.

¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup chopped nutmeats

Beat the egg whites to a froth, and then add a light sifting of the sugar, continuing to add some while beating until all of it has been added gradually. The meringue should hold a point when the beater is drawn out of it. Then add the vanilla and spread the meringue on top of each of the unbaked layers. Sprinkle the chopped nutmeats on top of the meringue. Bake for 20 to 25 minutes in a moderate oven (325 degrees 350 degrees F.). Allow to cool, then remove from the pans and fill with:

Pineapple Filling.

1 cup whipping cream
1½ tablespoons powdered sugar
1 cup crushed pineapple, drained
¼ teaspoon vanilla

Place one layer, meringue side down, on a cake plate. Whip the cream, add the powdered sugar, drained pineapple, and vanilla. Spread this filling on the first layer. Then place the other layer on top of the pineapple filling, meringue side up.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Ultra Violet and Skin Cancer

A few years ago A. H. Roffo, of the Cancer Institute of Buenos Aires called attention to the extensive incidence of skin cancers on the face and the backs of the hands of residents in the Argentine. Among 5,000 patients received at the cancer institute under his direction none showed malignant growths on any part of the body covered by clothing. At that time he stated as his opinion that ultraviolet from the sun, while valuable in many particulars, could give rise to the stimulation of certain skin cells to the point of malignancy. His data showed that 61 per cent of the enlargements were found about the nose, as compared with 18 per cent on the cheeks and none on the forehead.

Inasmuch as men are exposed more to outdoor sunlight, it is interesting to note that 70 per cent of the tumors occurred in men and the remainder in women. Even with equal exposure Roffo believes that the percentage would remain about the same, as women protect the skin better through the use of powder, rouge, etc. They use more creams and ointments and, as a result suffer fewer or less severe ultraviolet burns. Because of the pigmented epidermis of Negroes and mulattoes, ultraviolet is filtered out and not a single case was discovered in this group of individuals.

The conclusion seems obvious; namely, that while ultraviolet is very helpful in the preservation of health and well being, like any other powerful agent, it can be used to excess. The fad of acquiring a deep sun tan of the face may prove a two-edged sword. Tanning of the whole body, however, if gradual and not accompanied by sunburn, is safe.

'Boondoggling' An Insult, Says Socialist Chief

Thomas Holds Unemployed Are Forgotten by Business Heads.

"Boondoggling" is an insult to the very definition of work, and when the time comes masses of unemployed and WPA laborers can be counted on to help build up a Farmer-Labor Party, Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, told the second annual convention of the Workers' Alliance in session at the Labor Department's auditorium yesterday.

Thomas was the featured speaker of the day as more than 1,000 WPA workers and jobless men and women, from every State in the Union, gathered here.

"The American business interests and the middle class generally are doing their best to forget the 12,000,000 unemployed and to reduce taxes and balance the budget out of the stomachs of the unemployed," Thomas declared.

"It must be said, to a large extent, the unemployed themselves have co-operated in this effort by their amazing docility in the face of such a life of misery as no country has a right to inflict, least of all the country where we have the productive equipment to create a minimum income of from $2,000 to $2,500 a year for each family.

The delegates, most of whom traveled to the convention by day coach and bus, rose to cheer the Socialist when he finished his address.

Earlier in the day the delegates heard David A. Lasser, national secretary of their organization, declare that failure of the Administration to accede to the demands of the workers should bring from 50,000 to 100,000 unemployed men and women to Washington this summer "to camp here until authorities will listen to us."

His statement was made in his keynote address. The parley, which opened yesterday morning, will continue through Thursday.

At this time a protest march of the delegates will be staged, probably filing past the White House and across the Capitol Plaza.

Several independent State organizations were represented yesterday. These include the California Federation of Unemployed, United Workers of New Jersey, Florida Federation of Workers Leagues and others.

Lobby Hearings Reopen Today; 'Crusaders' Up

Black Committee's Fight on Hearst Injunction Also Scheduled.

The Senate Lobby Investigating Committee will be busy on two fronts today. It will resume its hearings of alleged lobbying activities, and it will defend an injunction suit in the District Supreme Court.

Officials of the Crusaders, once a powerful organization in opposition to prohibition and later active in opposition to tax increases, have been called. Among the witnesses is expected to be Fred Clark, of Chicago, president of the organization. The inquiry will be conducted by Senator Gibson (Republican), Vermont, a member of the committee.

The injunction suit was brought by William Randolph Hearst, publisher, who seeks to prevent the committee from making use of his telegrams seized by the committee. The committee will be represented in court by Crampton Harris, of Alabama, former law partner of Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the committee. Hearst will be represented by Elisha Hanson.

Although attorneys have not revealed the details of their arguments, it was anticipated that Hanson would make use of the decision handed down by the Supreme Court in the Securities and Exchange Commission case Monday in which the court warned against encroachment upon the private rights of citizens.

The arguments will be heard by Chief Justice Wheat, who several weeks ago enjoined the Western Union Telegraph Co. from turning over to the committee telegrams of Silas Strawn, Chicago lawyer.

Meanwhile, a Congressional conference committee is expected soon to take up legislation designed to curb lobbying activities. Bills have been passed by both the Senate and the House, but they differ in some major particulars. The committee will seek to combine them into a bill acceptable to both Houses.

The House bill provides that lobbyists seeking to influence legislation must register, list their expenditures, their incomes and reveal the names of their employers.

Two Get 2-Year Terms; Illicit Distilling Scored

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—Calling moonshining in post-prohibition days as bad as counterfeiting, Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson today sentenced two men to serve two years each at Leavenworth Penitentiary for operating a large still in suburban Palos Park.

The prisoners, Frank Maranto, 40, of Harvey, Ill., and Benjamin Presser, 40, of Hammond, Ind., pleaded they were employed only two days as cookers when agents of the alcohol tax unit seized the still. Both admitted their guilt but refused to name the owner.

Judge Wilkerson said: "There is no excuse for moonshining since repeal. It's as bad as counterfeiting and you must learn your lesson."

Using Girl as a Shield, 5 Rob Bank of $10,000

Berlin, Conn., April 7 (AP).—Five robbers, all armed, entered the Berlin Savings Bank shortly before 2 p. m. today and escaped in an automobile after looting the vault. The loss was fixed tentatively at $10,000.

The robbers used a girl to shield them as they covered bank employes with their weapons. They followed the girl into the bank and leaped over the railing separating the cashier's compartment from the main lobby. Besides the girl, there were three bank employes in the building.

SPRY, WIDE AND HANDSOME!

LOOK it over, brother: you may be the very man for whom we built this knockout of a car, the brilliant new Series 40 Buick SPECIAL!

We had in mind a fellow with an appetite for action, an eye for style, a hone for sound solid value for his money.

We thought probably he'd have a wife, perhaps a family—so he'd want a car that was safe as well as swift—sweet, steady, gracious in its answer to wheel and brake.

So we built him this big, full-sized, roomy beauty and then powered it with a valve-in-head straight-eight engine that's almost as quiet, quick and laborless in its pull as a magnet.

We gave the Special solid footing—made it wider than it is high to ride poised on even keel, with no tire-howl on the curves, no creep, no sway.

We gave it style—modern, clean, fresh-as-the-minute style, but style without eye-shock or straining for effect.

We gave it backbone, stamina as any car must have to be a real Buick—comfort that only Knee-Action can give—toughness, the stay-out-of-the-shop sort of toughness in every strut, nut and part.

And then we gave it safety, safety rooted in dependable Buick quality, and capped with such features as straight-line-stop tiptoe hydraulics and the famed solid steel "Turret Top."

Spry, wide and handsome, that's this phenomenal performer in a phrase—only one name would fit it when we were through: the Buick SPECIAL.

The price is the lowest a Buick ever carried—the upkeep is what you'd expect of a six—try it, and you'll see it's your kind of automobile!

NO OTHER CAR IN THE WORLD HAS ALL THESE FEATURES
VALVE-IN-HEAD STRAIGHT-EIGHT ENGINE gives more power per unit of fuel than any other type of engine of equal displacement and compression
ANOLITE PISTONS, durable, long-lasting, 50% lighter, increase bearing life 150%
SEALED CHASSIS keeps dirt and water from all moving parts, protects from wear and erosion
LUXURIOUS "TURRET TOP" BODY BY FISHER, with No Draft Ventilation—the smartest, safest, strongest body built
TIPTOE HYDRAULIC BRAKES, giving safe, straight-line stops under lightest pressures
KNEE-ACTION COMFORT AND SAFETY, the true gliding ride
TORQUE-TUBE DRIVE, for steadier, more stable roadability
AUTOMATIC STARTING, SPARK AND HEAT CONTROL, for convenience, efficiency, economy
BUILT-IN LUGGAGE COMPARTMENTS, with ample capacity for necessary luggage FRONT-END RIDE STABILIZER, for elimination of side-sway at speed or on curves

"Buick's the Buy"

$765 to $1045 are the list prices of the new Buicks at Flint, Mich., subject to change without notice. Standard and special accessories groups on all models at extra cost. All Buick prices include safety glass throughout as standard equipment.

Symphony's Life Menaced In Union Row

Disclosure of Salaries Over $40 a Week Is Issue.

Importing Musicians Is Subject of Another Controversy.

The continuance of the National Symphony Orchestra appeared yesterday to be seriously threatened by a dispute between its board of directors and the local musicians' union.

At a joint meeting of the directors and orchestra members in the auditorium of the Library of Congress yesterday afternoon, Walter B. Howe, secretary of the orchestra association, aired difficulties between the association and the union.

The immediate issue revolves around the refusal of George Gaul, union member and personnel manager of the orchestra, to divulge to the union the salary of musicians receiving more than the $40 a week minimum pay.

Expelled From Union.

After Gaul, acting in accordance with the desire of the directors, refused to reveal this information, he was expelled from the union, effective April 13. John E. Birdsell, secretary of the union, informed Walter B. Howe, secretary of the National Symphony Orchestra Association, that under the terms of the existing contract it would be necessary to engage another personnel manager.

The union took this action despite the fact that Howe, in a letter to Birdsell dated March 24, had furnished the salary information together with a blank form of the contract signed by each musician receiving more than the minimum pay.

Holding that Gaul had "been placed in the impossible position of confidential relationship with two different parties differing between themselves," the board stated that it "could not proceed with another contract unless assured that Gaul would not be penalized."

Since the union has already expelled Gaul, thus prohibiting his continuance as personnel director, and since the association maintains it will not renew contract without Gaul's continued services, the situation is deadlocked.

Dispute on Importation.

The other subject of controversy is the importation of musicians to fill posts which the management considers cannot be filled from local ranks.

Union rules would not allow such imported musicians to play outside engagements here or to become members of the local union without the consent of that body. In his statement yesterday Howe said "the association had been assured that such consent would not be given."

Since the association cannot afford to induce musicians to come to Washington under these conditions, it considers that "the orchestra is halted in the progress which we must promise to our public, and to our contributors as a condition to their future support."

It is understood that members of the orchestra are meeting at once to consider their stand in the dispute. Until the controversy is settled the future of both the possible summer concerts and the regular winter season seems uncertain.

Boy, 15, Held For Hearing In Car Death

Youth Is Accused of Running Down Pedestrian.

Novice at Driving Weeps When Coroner's Jury Gives Verdict.

A 15-year-old boy, accused of running down a pedestrian the first time he was ever behind the steering wheel of an automobile was ordered held for Police Court action under the negligent homicide act by a coroner's jury yesterday.

The youngster, James A. Bettis, 100 block of B street northeast, burst into tears when the jury announced its verdict. He was accused in the death of James Quirk, 22, 1314 Tenth street northwest.

According to testimony, James was seated in a parked car in an alley near Fourteenth and H streets northwest. The alley was blocked and when a truck was unable to pass, James was asked to move the car.

Car Jumped Forward.

"I had never driven a car before," James told the coroner's jury, "but I thought I could move it. I turned on the ignition switch and stepped on the starter. The car jumped forward. I didn't see anybody until the car hit him."

Quirk and Charles Rogers, 466 Massachusetts avenue northwest, were standing in front of the car. They were crushed between the car James had started and another auto. Quirk died the following day in Emergency Hospital. Rogers suffered minor injuries.

Struck Head.

James was assisting in delivery work for a newspaper route agent.

Brown was struck by Harvey's car March 21 near Second street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast. Accoring to witnesses, Brown was standing on a loading platform and his head was struck by the side of the car. He died April 1 in Providence Hospital.

The coroner's jury held his death to be accidental.

G. W. to Meet Fire Rules.

'Immunity' To Be Tested In Duffy Case

Conference Today Will Attempt to Settle Traffic Question.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Attempts to settle Washington's much discussed question of Congressional traffic immunity will be made today when District legal experts meet in the corporation counsel's office to confer on the month-old parking charges against Senator F. Ryan Duffy (Democrat), Wisconsin.

Since March 9 application for a warrant charging Senator Duffy with illegal parking on upper Connecticut avenue has been pending in Police Court. And for the last two weeks the warrant application has been "filed" in a desk drawer of Assistant Corporation Counsel George D. Neilson, it was learned yesterday.

When Policeman S. J. Prophet, Eighth Precinct, first applied for the arrest warrant, officials said:

"The case will be handled in routine fashion."

But instead of following routine procedure, it was disclosed, the warrant never left Police Court for service and Policeman Prophet was never notified of its disposition. Neilson said today's conference will be called in an effort to obtain a ruling from Acting Corporation Counsel Vernon West.

"I am of the opinion that a violation of District parking or traffic regulations is not a breach of the peace," Neilson said yesterday. "We must think twice before we cause the arrest of a member of Congress. The Constitution provides certain immunities and we must be sure of ourselves."

He then cited an act of Congress which provides "Congressional tags" for members' automobiles. By the use of these tags, a Senator or Representative may park his car "at any available curb space in the District—except fireplugs, loading platforms or loading stations."

Another Congressional angle entered local traffic records yesterday, police reported, when the automobile of Representative John Lesinski (Democrat), of Michigan, crashed into a street car loading platform at Fourteenth and U streets northwest.

Police said the front of Representative Lesinski's car was badly damaged. No action was taken. The accident occurred early in the morning and the Michigan lawmaker said a red warning lantern on the platform was not burning.

Mrs. Joseph Koski, who with her husband was a passenger in the car, was slightly bruised.

Police Drag Waters For Missing Student

Police last night were mystified by the disappearance of Donald F. MacCarthy, 24, brilliant fourth-year student at Georgetown University Medical School, whose roadster was found yesterday abandoned at Hains Point.

Footprints led through the silt fro the car to the edge of the sea wall. There were no footprints returning.

Thomas Zborowski, a fellow student with whom MacCarthy lived in a second-floor room at 1419 Thirty-third street northwest, told police the boy had been despondent over approaching examinations.

He had been studying hard recentl, he said. The examinations are only three weeks ahead.

Zborowski went to look for his roommate yesterday morning when the latter did not return home the night before. He searched the parks because, he told police, the boy was in the habit of riding around in them. It was he who discovered the car.

Harbor police were notified and dragged the water around Hains Point all afternoon. The search was abandoned early last evening because of darkness and will be resumed this morning.

Detectives George Darnell and Aubrey Tolson, of the Homicide Squad, who have been investigating the case, were not convinced that it was a suicide.

The Rev. David McCauley, regent of the medical school, said last night that McCarthy was a very popular student.

"I can see no reason for his disappearance," he said. "He had nothing to worry about so far as studies are concerned because he was a brilliant student. However, he was a nervous type and might have become worried over the coming examinations."

Police sent a lookout for the boy last night, describing him as 6 feet 1 inch in height, weighing 175 pounds. He was wearing a blue overcoat, a brown felt hat and a pair of brown oxfords at the time of his disappearance.

He comes from North Bangor, N. Y.

Street Cites Harm Done By Relief Cut

One Family Now Has No Help in Effort to Retain Health.

Relief fund reduction, which forced officials to cut all employables from relief rolls, has brought to a halt rehabilitation efforts of practicable benefit to the community in the present and the future, Elwood Street, director of public welfare, said yesterday.

Specific examples of the effect on the cessation of relief on many families and individuals on relief were cited in reports made by relief workers in the field.

The John Doe family was one. Doe was a laborer on a WPA job. He had a wife and nine children. The eldest was 14 and the youngest 3 months of age. They lived in a tumbledown shack on an unfrequented Southeast street. To reach the house one must cross a little footbridge over a ditch in which there always was stagnant water and debris.

Germs Breed.

"It was an excellent breeding place for germs," a relief worker pointed out.

The house was of three rooms and there were three beds. Three children slep in one, four in another, and the two youngest slept with their father and mother. There was no serious illness, although the children were undernourished.

Mrs. Doe worked a couple of days a week to supplement the $45 WPA wage of her husband. Then the last baby was born and she had to give that up. The family fell behind in the rent. Their food was poor in quality and meager in quantity.

Sought Aid.

Confronted by these conditions Doe sought supplemental aid from the public assistance division. Minimum requirements of the family were placed at $90 a month for food and rent, it was estimated. Correction was begun of the bad living conditions by moving the family to a six-room house and negotiations were begun to get them two more beds.

"It will be impossible to continue the treatment which was started," officials said. "It might have been carried to a successful conclusion. Already John Doe is worrying about how to pay the rent in his new home and Mrs. Doe's hope of getting warm clothing for the children, so they can attend school regularly, has been banished. So John will probably go back to the old hand-to-mouth method of living and instead of adequate balanced diet, the children will have to be content with a quality of food that can be purchased for $8.75 per week for 11 persons, as that is all that is left after the rent is paid."

Finance Group Will Deny D. C. Is Undertaxed

Senate Appropriations Unit Slated for Meeting on Issue Today.

Facts and figures to refute charges that Washington is undertaxed will be presented to the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations this afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, by the municipal finance committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

The data, said to be the most exhaustive record on comparative taxes in the District, were prepared by L. H. Parker, technical adviser to the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee.

Edward F. Colladay, chairman of the finance committee, will present the figures. He will be assisted by John Saul, president of the Board of Trade, and Robert J. Cottrell, executive secretary.

Yesterday the Senate sub-committee heard spokesmen for a group of civic associations and Negro medical societies. They asked for civic improvements, an increase in school appropriations, and restoration of public health funds.

Witnesses included G. W. Beasley, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, and the following members of the Medical Chirugical Society: Dr. Paul B. Cornely, Dr. H. A. Poindexter, Dr. W. F. Nelson, Dr H C. Scurlock, Dr Charles A. Allen, Dr. Frances Dwyer, Dr. F. D. Whitney and Dr. R. Frank Jones.

H. T. Woodson, president of the Northeast Boundary Citizens Association, and V. F. Ramsaur asked a $500,000 appropriation for a new senior high school at Twenty-fourth street and Benning road; $150,000 to buy land for the Watts Run Parkway, and $5,000 for a northeast branch library.

Weather to Stay Chilly in District

Clearing skies and continued chilly weather were predicted for Washington and vicinity by the Weather Bureau last night.

There will be little variation in temperature from yesterday's maximum of 52 at 6 p. m. Yesterday's minimum was 44 at 7:15 a. m.

Bureau experts said the inclement conditions and the rainfall were caused by the Southland's terrific death-dealing tornado.

Yesterday the delicate cherry blossoms around the Tidal Basin reached their peak, but because of the dismal downpour Japanese Ambassador Hirosi Saito conceled his annual visit. He is expected to perform this duty today, beneath brighter skies.

Compromise On Airport Bill Approaching

Palmisano to Ask Cut in Appropriation to $10,000 Tomorrow.

Conferees on the long-delayed District airport legislation will meet at 11 a. m. tomorrow in another effort to effect an agreement that will be acceptable to both the House and the Senate.

Indications are that the present revised measure will be changed only as to the authorized appropriation and the responsibility for the initial cost.

Because of House opposition to the report accepted by the Senate, Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of the House managers, will propose that the authorization be reduced from $100,000 to $10,000, which will eliminate any funds for options on prospective sites. The $10,000 cost would be borne wholly by the District.

Should the conferees reach an agreement tomorrow, they will ask for prompt ratification of the report by the House and Senate and immediate appointment of three members of the House and three Senators to the commission which will be established to select a site for the airport. Three other members are to be named by the President.

SEC Refuses Willson Listing As D. C. Broker

Charles C. Willson, investment and securities salesman and broker in the Washington-Baltimore area for the last 15 years, with offices in the Woodward Building here, has been refused registration as an over-the-counter broker, the Securities Exchange Commission announced yesterday.

The commission's refusal was based on Willson's alleged connection with the sale of the "high-pressure" stock of the Television & Electric Corporation for the Howard M. Roberts Co., of Baltimore. Willson was said to have sold about 250 shares of the stock at $2 a share in this city.

Last May the SEC brought suit against the Roberts company charging attempted fraud and misrepresentation in selling the stocks, and secured a temporary injunction against the company. When Willson, as one of the defendants, failed to answer the court subpena of the District Supreme Court, he, too, was enjoined from selling the stock. Because this injunction had not been lifted, registration was refused him by the SEC.

In a reply and motion to vacate this injunction, filed Saturday by Willson through his attorney, Emmet Borden, the securities broker denied any knowledge of the fraudulent nature of the Roberts stock. He also denied that he had made any misrepresentations in selling the stock, as was testified by five witnesses at the SEC hearings.

His connection with the Roberts company, Willson explained, lasted for only six weeks. He said he resigned because of his "suspicion." His failure to answer the court subpena was due to the belief that in resigning he had "washed his hands of the company" and the assurance in a telephone conversation with Roberts that he "had nothing to worry about as the company lawyer is taking care of everything," Willson stated.

Alligood Waits Decision Today In Police Trial

Detective Sergt. Frank M. Alligood, champion stolen car retriever for the Police Department, went before the Police Trial Board yesterday on seven charges ranging from intoxication to assault on a superior officer.

After hearing testimony in the case for nearly two hours, the board took the case under advisement shortly after noon. A decision will be handed down today.

Alligood was suspended and the charges preferred after he is alleged to have drawn his pistol and threatened Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, while both were assigned to guard the President at the Willard Hotel, March 7.

Daniel B. Maher, defense attorney, offered the board testimony of Dr. John A. Reed, a member of the Board of Police Surgeons, to the effect that Alligood had been under care of a doctor for 15 years and was suffering an undetermined brain injury.

Reed testified that he examined Alligood at headquarters immediately after the incident and found no trace of alcohol. He said the detective suffered the head injury in an automobile accident while on duty.

Inspector Thompson told the board he had found an almost empty whisky bottle in Alligood's pocket, and that he was convinced the detective was intoxicated on that night.

Thompson further testified Alligood was parked in a police car near the F street entrance to the hotel. He asked the policeman the reason for this apparent violation of police regulations. The detective chief continued that Alligood made no answer and drew his pistol.

Thompson stated he disarmed Alligood after a struggle in which both rolled on the sidewalk.

Under questioning by Defense Counsel Maher the inspector said he knew no reason why Alligood might wish to harm him. He is one of the best men in his line in the department, Thompson stated.

When Alligood took the stand in his own defense he told the board he did not remember anything that happened on the night of March 7. He stated he did not know he had assaulted a superior officer, or that he had a bottle of whisky in his possession.

Maher introduced a motion that the charge be dismissed on the grounds the detective was mentally incompetent on this night, after Mrs. Alligood had testified how her husband had awakened several times at night and screamed he was going mad. Sometimes he would start into the street in his pajamas to look for stolen automobiles, she related.

Inspector William G. Stott concluded the hearing, saying he would take the case under advisement, consider Maher's motion for a dismissal and return a verdict this morning.

War on Disease Greatest War, Asserts New Surgeon General

The new surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service is determined that the war that counts most is the war upon disease.

In his first newspaper interview after being sworn in as successor to Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming, Dr. Thomas Parran, jr., observed:

That we should be talking of eradicating tuberculosis, not merely controlling it.

That "one neglected phase of public health work is the placing of better tools in the hands of private physicians in order to enable them to practice more efficiently." Government should make available to them, Dr. Parran said, diagnostic aids, biological products (serums, antitoxins, vaccines, etc.) and home nursing care for patients unable to pay for such service.

That syphilis, while easy to control from a medical standpoint, still presents a serious health problem due principally to prudery and the difficulty of getting people to recognize its widespread effect.

That public health education must be emphasized and re-emphasized throughout the land if the United States is to become a healthier place in which to live.

Probably the most widely experienced public health leader in the United States, although he was born as recently as September 29, 1892, in Calvert County, Md., Dr. Parran's six-year record as New York State health commissioner will make him a much-watched man in his new post. He is 43.

Loaned by the Public Health Service to Albany, N. Y., at the request of then Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Dr. Parran introduced reforms that may have shocked the old order, but which, nevertheless, bore admirable results.

Through the State health department, tuberculin was distributed free to private physicians in the offensive against tuberculosis. To fight cancer, X-ray and surgical materials were furnished in the same manner; against syphilis, neoarsphenamine, and against pneumonia, life-saving serum.

By way of contrast, District Health Officer George C. Ruhland was recently reprimanded by a member of Congress because the municipal diagnostic laboratories are available to doctors in private practice.

Ex-Aid in House Office Building Plans Return as Representative

After 30 years on the side lines, watching the famous men of Congress come and go, William C. Houk, retired assistant custodian of the House Office Building, said yesterday he would come back to the House, this time as a Representative from Tennessee.

Houk's announcement that he would follow in the footsteps of his father came on his forty-fifth wedding anniversary.

His father, the late L. C. Houk, was a Republican Representative from Tennessee for 14 years. Houk's brother, John, also was a member of Congress, representing Ohio, and his foster-brother, R. C. Austin, later became a Representative from his father's district in Tennessee.

Now a sprightly 67-year-old, Houk plans to return to Knoxville, his birthplace, to run for Congress in 1938.

In their modest home, the walls of which are covered with paintings by his wife, Lola, Houk reminisced of the "good old days" when politics were an integral part of every man's life.

Houk lives at 111 Carroll street southeast, in the shadow of the building he supervised for so long—the building where he may have an office two years hence.

His first job, in the folding room of the House of Representatives, began in 1909 when R. W. Austin, then Representative from Tennessee, asked him to come to Washington. Austin was adopted by the elder Houk, and had acted as his secretary for many years.

He went to the Pension Office in 1912 and was transferred to the House Office Building in 1913, where he remained until his retirement last August.

Many notables passed in and out of office in his 30 years in the building.

"Most lovable," he said, "was old Uncle Joe Cannon. Why, I can still remember his fight to retain the gavel in 1913 when the Republican insurgents tried to get his chair, and how Milton H. Hollingsworth ran up to the dais and wrapped Uncle Joe in an American flag to save the day."

"The most able man of all," he said, "was James Mann, of Illinois. I have to take my hat off to him and I've seen them all."

"Now take Champ Clark," he continued, warming up to his memories, "He was the fairest of all Speakers, but Finis Garrett, Speaker from 1912 to 1920, was the greatest parlimentarian, in my estimation, to ever hold the chair."

Will Rogers' Memorial Week Being Planned

All Theaters Are Urged to Take Part in May Drive for Saranac Hospital.

New York, April 7.—Plans for a Will Rogers memorial week, to be held in all motion picture theaters throughout the country in happy memory of the screen philosopher, have been announced here by Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

The celebration will be held during a full week in May, and all people in and out of the theater professions will be urged to participate.

The week also will mark the dedication of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital at Saranac Lake in the Adirondacks, a million-dollar institution, formerly known as the N. V. A. Sanitarium and Lodge, which has been presented to the Will Rogers Memorial Commission. The hospital will be dedicated to the service of those of Will Rogers' profession of stage and screen who are sick and needy.

Would Have Pleased Star.

This tribute is considered by the commission and many of Will Rogers' most intimate friends as the type of memorial which would have been most pleasing to him. It will give aid to the unfortunate members of the profession which he loved and to which he in his lifetime contributed so greatly.

Among the purposes of the celebration in May will be the raising of funds which will be used for the maintenance of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital, and for the general purpose of the Will Rogers Memorial Commission.

This program is in line with announcements made by Jesse Jones, treasurer of the Will Rogers Memorial Commission, and by Mr. Hays, on behalf of the motion picture industry, at the time of the acceptance by the commission of the gift of the hospital.

General Fund Not Involved.

No part of the funds which were obtained in the original drive of the Will Rogers Memorial Commission will be used in connection with the support of the hospital, and it is expected a substantial part of the money received in the celebration next month will be given to the commission for its general purposes.

The activities of the memorial commission in the use of its general funds are dedicated to the aid and establishment of useful agencies for assising handicapped children.

Thus, those who contributed in the coming campaign will be devoting their gifts toward the useful humanitarian endeavors conducted at the memorial hospital on behalf of the needy and afflicted of Will Rogers' profession and to the general aid of handicapped children.

Theaters Urged to Help.

Mr. Hays announced that Maj. L. E. Thompson, president of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation, has consented to act as chairman of the campaign committee.

He will be aided in the conduct of the drive for funds by members of the industry at large, by members of the Will Rogers Memorial Commission and by leading friends of Will Rogers.

It is hoped to enlist in this activity all theaters in the United States, including those operated by the major circuits and those operated independently, in order that the tribute to Will Rogers may be truly representative of the entire motion picture industry.

About The Showshops

NO wonder H. G. Wells more or less haunted the set of "Things to Come" while it was being filmed by London Films, under the supervision of Alexander Korda!

Having read the scenario of this original Wells work for the screen, based on his widely circulated book of "The Shape of Things to Come," on Monday night, this column is ready to state on the Tuesday afternoon preceding the Wardman Park preview of the picture that Mr. Wells in his first venture into the celluloids expounds a definite, concise and, at times, profound theory of what will be necessary during the next century or two to salvage the world from the chaos toward which it seems to be drifting.

BELL.

"There is one thing in the making of my film which I particularly want to avoid," Wells told newspapermen before embarking on this important enterprise, "and that is the impression that we are presenting some sort of imaginative Utopia—an ideal but impracticable existence.

I want to convey the fact that the condition of life shown on the screen is a practical objective for a reasonable man. "You can understand," he added, "that our hope of achieving a planned world is to get people to realize, in the first place, that such a thing is possible. It was then, as a practical design for living and not as the nightmare of a dreamer that 'Things to Come' was undertaken."

A reading of the scenario leads to the belief that Mr. Wells has attained the desired end with a fine pictorial flourish. More of this, however, in a later column after we have viewed "Things to Come" as it actually reveals itself upon the screen.

Although not generally known to the customers out front, since late Sunday afternoon, Ben Bernie has been making his personal appearances on the stage of Loew's Fox under the handicap of serious illness. For two performances attending physicians stood in the wings to forestall any acute emergency that might arise. The old maestro, however, is one of those indomitable souls who are bound fast by that crazy fetich of the theater that "the show must go on." Not only has the show on the Fox stage been going on, but rehearsals for the weekly Bernie broadcast also were conducted as usual and the air program presented on schedule. The Jolson family reunion on Lanier place, to which Al had invited his pal, much to Ben's regret, had to be foregone.

It is pleasant to be able to report that just before shaking the mists of the Potomac banks off her slicker, Eleanore Smith, Mr. Bernie's "right-hand man," who left for Boston last night, informed this column that the boss was feeling some better and showed signs of gradual improvement, although the "croakers" had warned him he'd have to take it easy for a while. Taking it easy for Ben means four or five shows a day, a flock of rehearsals and a broadcast or two a week—provided no benefits or important social engagements bob up!

THAT acquisitive fellow, Norman Pyle, newspaper space grabber de luxe of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exploitation department, under the direction of our old friend, "Bill" Ferguson, currently devoting his delusive whimsies to the aggrandizement of "The Great Ziegfeld," opening at the National Sunday night, April 19, gets more breaks than a heavyweight's nose!

I quote from a letter bearing date of April 5, 1936, from Miss Alva M. Joesting, but before doing so, wish to offer the reminder that Miss Joesting is the sister of the former Miss Marjorie Joesting, who was the "Miss Washington" in the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant of a few years ago. Now the quote: "On the morning of March 19 I glanced over the front page headlines and then turned, as usual, to see what Nelson Bell had to say. Well, was I delighted! Here was a most interesting write-up about one of the big numbers in the Ziegfeld picture, mentioning the fact that it was conducted by Arthur Lange. I was really thrilled, because Arthur Lange is the husband of my sister, Marjorie. Marge had written that Arthur had been borrowed from Twentieth Century-Fox by M.-G.-M. for "The Great Ziegfeld," but she never wrote any details. I sent her the clipping.

"In a recent letter she said: 'Thanks a lot for that nice clipping. I was on the set when they shot that number (Ed. note: "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody.") all day and all night. It was gorgeous, all that music—and what a set! They previewed the picture in Santa Barbara last Wednesday, and although I had seen it many times at the studio, I still got a big thrill out of it. It is without a doubt unequalled by anything that has ever been done. Don't miss it—three hours long.'"

That ought to rate a pair on the aisle for the opening, eh, Norm?

THERE will be ample diversion for youngsters from 4 to 94 on tap in the downtown area on the next few Saturday mornings.

At Loew's Palace Theater an "Easter Bunny Matinee" will be given this Saturday, featuring Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphony cartoon comedies. Admission, regardless of age or seat location, will be 25 cents. Bearing in mind the success of former Walt Disney programs, the Palace will be sold out Saturday morning. Anticipating something of the sort, the management announces that doors will be open at 8:30 a. m.

Down at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan a week later, April 18, a "Popeye, the Sailor" program will be offered in repetition of the innovation inaugurated last February. Doors will be open for this bill at 9:30 a. m. Seven cartoon comedies in the Popeye series will be offered, as follows: "A Clean-Shaven Man," "Adventures of Popeye," "Better or Worser," "Pleased to Meetcha," "Be Kind to Animals," "Brotherly Love" and "Football Hero." In addition, a two-reel Vitaphone comedy, "Carnival Days," and a one-reel novelty, "Wee Men," featuring the Singer Midgets, will be shown.

True to his generous habit, the ol' moustrap, Ben Bernie, long may he wave that fiddle bow, upon his arrival in Washington sent the drama desks gift cases of the wares he celebrates over the radio—keglined and properly filled. Mine arrived out on Gallatin street last Saturday, but I wouldn't be sure it will last until next Saturday.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation presents a chamber orchestra from the National Symphony Orchestra in the Library of Congress auditorium Tuesday afternoon; conductor, Dr. Hans Kindler; soloists: Harold Bennett, flute, and Harold Gomber, oboe. Program: Overture in B minor for flute and strings (Bach), Symphony No. 44 in E minor, "Trauersymphonie" (Haydn), "On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring" (Frederick Delius), A Fugal Concerto for flute, oboe and strings (Gustav Holst), Prelude and Fugue (Roy Harris), two excerpts from "El Amor Brujo" (Manuel de Falla).

There was much enjoyable material in this last concert of the season under auspices of the music division of the Library of Congress, and a large audience heartily indorsed it as well worth hearing. The Bach overture, which would in present-day usage be called a suite, had a familiar sound, for Dr. Kindler has presented the entire work, and portions of it, on sundry occasions not far in the past. It represents the worldly side of Bach, the genial writing of a court musician bent upon pleasing his patron with a rondeau, a sarabande, a bouree, a polonaise, and a concluding bit of gay persiflage.

Although the printed program gave no hint to that effect, I surmise that the "Trauersymphonie" of Haydn received its local premiere, and possibly its first American performance; I had not heard it before, nor do I recall having seen it listed for any concert. It is in an unusually solemn mood for Haydn, maintaining consistently an elegiac atmosphere quite at variance with his cheerful habit. Simple and clear in construction, it is a perfect example of the early symphonic form, and the only remarkable characteristic is a foreshadowing of Beethoven's first period in a few harmonic passages.

Delightfully vernal in feeling is the description piece by the late Frederick Delius, a work not often performed in this country. The last time I heard it was some ten years ago when Percy Grainger conducted it in a New York concert devoted entirely to Delius. Completely pastoral in feeling, it successfully evokes the charm of the English countryside. Not the least part of its fine craftsmanship is the manner in which the imitated notes of the cuckoo are so unobtrusive that one has to listen for them attentively.

The year 1934, in which we lost Frederick Delius, also ended the earthly career of Gustav Holst, whose fugal concerto is an ingenious and entertaining work, distinguish by both clever writing and subtle wit. It combines admirably the intellectual and emotional qualities of music.

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, April 6.

BING CROSBY is making a Western flicker called "Rhythm On the Range." This particular sequence takes place in Madison Square Garden. The cowboys are having their rodeo. The set appears to be an exact replica of the Garden. Crosby walks across the arena garbed as a cowboy. In the pocket of his silk shirt there is carefully placed a package of the "makin's," with the string and attached circular trade-mark hanging out. This positively makes Crosby a cowboy. Everything about the set has the atmosphere of a Western. Bing says: "While I'm in this pictural call me Hoot. That's who I am—Hoot Crosby."

CROSBY.

He points to Director Norman Taurog, who is wearing a big sombrero. "And call him," continues Hoot Crosby, "Tex Taurog." They seem to be enjoying themselves making this "horse opera."

Tex Taurog is ready. The camera turns. Hoot speaks his lines as the cowboys ride about the arena. This afternoon, it is not the actors who ad lib, but the horses.

Director Bill Howard sits on the floor and watches Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray rehearse a scene for "A Princess Comes Across." Director Howard favors long rehearsals, wanting to know every gesture of the performers before he shoots the scene.

He has his own method of making a picture, and once the scenario gets to the set he insists on being in complete charge, and that was the reason for his argument with an assistant producer.

One afternoon he took several hours to shoot a scene in which Lombard says "Aren't these lovely flowers?" And a person believed the scene should be retaken because the line in the script was "Aren't these beautiful flowers?"

• • • •

Director John Ford is using what is his peculiar method to get a fine performance from Katharine Hepburn in "Mary of Scotland." Director Ford prefers to ride an actress—or actor—into giving a performance.

For example, Hepburn is playing a scene with an actor who is new to flickers. The actor, it is evident, is rather nervous. He and Miss Hepburn play the scene. When it is completed, Director Ford says to the actor: "You were fine. But the take was spoiled, as usual, by Miss Hepburn. We'll do it again."

As a matter of fact, Director Ford is going to make another "take." This is his way of riding Hepburn. She is wise to it by now and doesn't resent it. She likes Director Ford and his method.

It would be great if you could see on the screen the various things actors and actresses do when they blow up in a scene. Some of the nicest ingenues, playing a sweet love scene, explode with words which would shock a sailor. Humphrey Bogart, playing a racketeer in the flicker "Bullets and Ballots," is delivering a big speech, and in the same tone of voice, as if reading a line, he says "From now on I can't remember anything." This is Bogart's way of blowing.

During the filming of the flicker "Romeo and Juliet," visitors were seldom allowed on the set. However, many members of the press wanted to see Norma Shearer as Juliet, believing they owed this to what they call their public.

It was decided, therefore, that these conscientious members of the press could see Juliet in action in the ballroom sequence. It seemed like a good decision. And this is how they arrived at it: In the ballroom sequence there are hundreds of extras on the set, and certainly a sprinkling of newspaper people wouldn't give any performer stage fright. Visitors were welcome to see the scene in which Leslie Howard meets Norma Shearer.

However, it was forgotten that in the ballroom sequence Miss Shearer does a dance. This is something new for her, and Miss Shearer would have felt more at ease playing a regular scene for the visitors. But that was the decision—and the show went on.

A good place to watch the performers is in the projection room when they are looking at the "rushes," watching themselves on the screen. Norma Shearer is really remarkable. She is able to detach herself from the person on the screen. The real Norma Shearer looks at the Norma Shearer on the screen with impersonal appraisal.

She will watch her performance and often be harsher than any critic.

8-Year Tax Inquiry In Britain Is 'Futile'

London, April 7 (AP).—After more than eight years' work, a committee appointed by Winston Churchill, when he was chancellor of the exchequer, confesses in a report published today that it is "a vain hope to codify the income tax law so the layman can easily understand it."

One of the discoveries of the committee is that the word "assessment" is used in eight different senses in existing legislation.

"The actual language in which many provisions are framed," said the committee, "is so intricate and obscure as to be frankly unintelligible. Probably no chapter in our legislation has incurred more condemnation from the judiciary for drafting imperfections."

Returns to Screen as "Dearest"

Having retired from active work before the cameras upon her marriage to John Barrymore, Dolores Costello, daughter of one of the cinema's first "matinee idols," now returns to the silver sheet in the role of the mother in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new film version of Frances Hodgson Burnett's enduring story of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," coming Friday to the screen at Loew's Fox Theater. The title role in this picture is played by that incomparable little Englishman, Freddie Bartholomew, who scored so decisively in the title role of "David Copperfield" and more recently with Victor McLaglen in "Professional Soldier." Miss Costello will be his "Dearest."

Firm Wins Suit to Bar Shirley Temple Film

New York, April 7 (AP).—Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation today was enjoined from producing, distributing and exhibiting the talking picture "Capt. January." Shirley Temple and Guy Kibbee are featured in the film.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals, reversing a District Court decision, granted the injunction to L. C. Page & Co., Inc. The court's opinion set forth that the rights of the plaintiff, as holder of motion picture privileges under assignment from Laura E. Richards, who wrote the novel in 1890, were sufficiently defined to call for injunctive relief.

'Dynamic Policy' of U.S. Praised by Doumergue

Paris, April 7 (AP).—Former President Gaston Doumergue said today that "the dynamic policy of the United States has all but changed the face of the world."

Speaking at a luncheon at the American Club, Doumergue asserted: "Though a young people, you already have learned to set your house in order. Today, mechanical progress, of which you are the great initiators, has transformed the world. The world has been contracted and men have been drawn closer together."

Australia Seeks Curb On Imports From U. S.

Canberra, Australia, April 7 (AP).—A sub-committee of the federal cabinet, appointed to investigate Australia's adverse balance of trade with the United States, today agreed upon a basis for restriction of American imports.

The customs department under the ministry for commerce is working out details of the plan, on which the strictest secrecy will be maintained until a statement is made to Parliament by the government.

The adverse balance with the United States was estimated at $50,000,000 this year.

Culbertson on Bridge

(Mr. Culbertson continues his reporting of a bridge game between two married couples, at which he acted as referee. He fines the players for their errors, according to degree.)

The explosion of the red-haired Mrs. White over her last fine had left a surcharged atmosphere that I, at least, found uncomfortable. The others probably were inured to these explosions. Mr. Black attempted to restore peace and good humor by remarking pseudo-playfully: "Why, Oh why, must gorgeous red hair be coupled with a hair-trigger temper?"

"Which probably is a new high for gallantry," sneered his wife, "considering that you're totally color blind!"

"Now, what does that mean?" Mrs. Black asked suspiciously.

"Ladies! Ladies! said both husbands.

"Your deal, Mr. White," I said.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 spade	2 clubs	2 hearts
Pass	3 spades	Pass	4 sp. (final bid

Mrs. White evidently had trouble in restraining herself from doubling the final contract, but she probably remembered what had happened on her last penalty double. So she sighed heavily, and led the king of clubs. After seeing the dummy she properly shifted to a trump. Mrs. Black won and led the ace of diamonds, next ruffing a diamond. Now she found herself in the dummy with no safe exit. She led a heart to her singleton. Mrs. White won the queen and led another trump. Declarer now was helpless. She had to lose a club and a diamond in addition to the two tricks already lost.

I mentally thanked my stars that this time I had to deal only with a blonde.

"Very bad, Mrs. Black. You tied yourself in knots on that hand. All you had to do, after winning the first trump lead, was to lead either a heart or a club, preferably the former, since Mrs. White might easily have had a six-card club suit. The heart king then would have been established for a discard and you never could have lost more than two clubs and one heart. Five dollars, please!"

"You're quite sure," purred Mrs. White, "that she didn't make a weeny-teeny $2.50 error?"

Split Verdict Is Awarded To Furr

Duffy Scores Technical K. O. Over Wilson in Semifinal.

Johnny Dean Too Good for Manny Wibble in Preliminary.

By Bill McCormick.

CARY WRIGHT, 6 to 1 underdog, almost pulled a Jimmy Braddock upset last night by staying the distance to lose a split and disputed decision to District Welterweight Champion Phil Furr in a 15-round bout for the title at Turner's Arena.

Hanging around with the murderous-punching local crown wearer for 15-rounds constituted a moral victory for Cary. The disputed decision was almost as good as a win since, if vocal demonstrations mean anything, practically every one of the 2,000 cash customers thought he had won, official vote or no official vote.

Wright crossed the dopesters, who had been wagering even money he would not remain right-side up for the scheduled 15-rounds, in the manner in which he fought Furr. Instead of tearing into close quarters as he was generally expected to do, Cary danced continually away from danger, rolling Furr's dangerous right off his chin with a supple shoulder.

Furr in Sluggish Form.

Making the fifth defense of his title, Furr was sluggish throughout most of the encounter, but flashed top form in spots. Those flashes usually sent Cary reeling and out on his feet, but not once did Phillip follow up such an advantage for some reason.

Wright was dropped for no count in the eighth and eleventh rounds by right hands to the chin. He was staggered too many times to mention but, all in all, gave a glorious account of himself despite the concerted chorus of boos that greeted the decision against him.

The champion weighed 146½; Wright, 145¾. Judge Bob Eller ballotted Wright the winner as Judge Henri DiSibour and Referee Eddie LaFond were voting for Furr. The Post scoresheet showed Furr the winner by 71½ points to 65 for Wright. The Post tally gave nine rounds to Furr, three to Wright and scored three even.

Jack Duffy, a terrific right-hand puncher from Baltimore, won on a fifth-round technical knockout from Bob Wilson, a terrific left-hand puncher, in a Dempsey-Firpo brand of semifinal scheduled for 8 rounds.

Duffy found the range in the second round, setting Wilson down for an 8-count with a bone-crushing right to the head. Wilson came up dazed, shook the cobwebs from his addled pate and proceeded to dump Duffy into the resin dust for a 2-count with a left and right to the kisser.

From then on, it was every man for himself, with first one gladiator and then the other popping into a slight lead. They were about even-stephen on points when Referee Eddie La Fond halted the action after 1 minute and 55 seconds of the fifth round because the blood was pouring from a cut over Wilson's left eye, which was opened in the second round and widened in subsequent rounds.

Detroit Hockey Team Wins Second Series Tilt

Detroit, April 7 (AP).—Detroit's rampant Red Wings, driving towards their first Stanley Cup series victory, overwhelmed the Maple Leafs of Toronto, 9 to 4, tonight in the highest scoring play-off in more than ten years. A near-capacity crowd of 12,456 watched the Wings score their second straight victory over the Leafs.

Where Is Cohen?

Requests have reached The Post sports department concerning the whereabouts of Joe Cohen's Columbian Athletic League sandlot clearing house. A number of teams have asked whether the youthful commissioner will run his organization on the same scale as last year; what classes he will operate; where the teams will play, and possibility of an All-Star tilt again at Griffith Stadium. Cohen or his assistants should call The Post sports department.

West Wins in Polo.

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—The West won its first National Open polo championship tonight when Steve Hammond, hard-riding member of a selected high-goal Western trio, banged home a final second goal which downed an All-Star trio from the East, 7-6½, in the concluding match of the indoor championships.

Lewis, 19, already has clinched the third-base job; Travis, 22, is already a fixture at shortstop, and Chase, 20, is the brightest prospect among the young pitchers.

Campbell Held Best of Golf Amateurs

Poll Puts Goodman Next as Likely Successor to Lawson Little.

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 7 (AP).—In this year's race for amateur golfing honors, yielded by Lawson Little, jr., after a two-year winning streak at home and abroad, the railbirds figure Seattle's brilliant young Albert (Scotty) Campbell to set the pace, with Omaha's Johnny Goodman the outstanding challenger.

A poll of players and newspapermen by the Associated Press, following the stormy battle of Augusta, today revealed Campbell a slight choice over Goodman, 14 to 11, with Walter Emery of Oklahoma, runner-up to Little last year in the National Amateur, and Charley Yates, of Atlanta, the Western amateur titleholder, as other members of a prospective "Big Four" nucleus for America's Walker Cup team this year.

Campbell dashed out in front in the tournament test here, which marked Little's debut as a professional. Scotty shot a 68 on his third round, finished as low amateur with 302 and led Goodman, a former National Open champion, by 13 strokes. Yates scored 307. Bobby Riegel, of Richmond, Southern amateur champion and only other simon-pure to finish, scored 319.

Jones Likes Goodman.

While refraining from any positive selections, Bob Jones praised Campbell's shot-making ability highly after a practice round with the Seattle youth. Little's choice of a successor is Goodman, because "Johnny has the experience and more good shots in his bag than any of the others."

Grantland Rice, dean of the sports writers, named Campbell, Goodman and Emery—in that order. Horton Smith, winner of the $5,000 Augusta National tournament for the second time, added Jimmy McHale, a California youngster, to the list. Tommy Armour, Chicago professional, prefers Goodman. Paul Runyan, former P. G. A. champion, listed Willie Turnesa, youthful pride of the Turnesa clan, as the "finest amateur shot-maker in the country."

Gene Sarazen took the slant that Little's retirement "will memorialize the amateur ranks, thus giving Great Britain a great chance to capture the Walker Cup for the first time at Pine Valley."

"There are a lot of good amateurs, including veteran former champions like Francis Ouimet and George Dunlap, as well as younger players like Campbell, Goodman, Yates and Emery, but they have yet to show real consistency," said Sarazen.

Texas is expected by many observers to produce outstanding contenders for Little's amateur crown, including Dave Goldman, 1934 runner-up; Ed White, intercollegiate champion; Gus Moreland, former Walker cupper, and Reynolds Smith, a sensation at each of the last two national tournament. At least two of these four are likely to make the Walker cup squad.

500 Lives in Balance As Racer Makes Movie

MUROC DRY LAKE, Calif., April 7 (AP).—Wiry, black-haired Harlan Fengler, the auto racer, held 500 human lives in his hands today.

Traveling 152 miles an hour, in a car weighing nearly 2 tons, Fengler hurtled through a crowd of people on the billard-table surface of the lake bed, holding a sure, steady course between a narrow lane of living flesh.

It was a movie scene.

But the aluminum monster he drove is the one in which he and his co-pilot, Lou Moore, will attempt to break the world's record for 24 hours, at Bonneville, Utah, next July.

And the people who stood in his patch until he was within 100 yards of them, were not trained "extras." They were desert folk, enlisted on the spot.

After the first "shot," Fengler crawled from the glassed-in cockpit, badly shaken, and said "that's the toughest thing I ever did."

He and Moore plan an attempt on the 24-hour record, set last year at Bonneville, by Capt. George Eyston, of England, at 140.5 miles per hour.

They built a 3,500-pound streamlined car, equipped with a dorsal fin and a telescopic "sight," similar to Sir Malcolm Campbell's "Bluebird" which established the world's record for a land mile.

It was hardly finished when the car was commandeered for a movie.

A 6-mile course was mapped over the dazzling white floor of the old lake bed for the scenes. The pilots, attempting a record, were supposed to have met with an accident, at one end. The crowd surged directly in the path of the thunderbolt as it returned.

They gave Fengler the checkered flag. He came down the course like a bullet. When he was about 150 yards from the crowd, the director yelled, "scatter."

Like rabbits, 500 people scurried for their lives. A narrow aisle opened before the hurtling automobile. Had Fengler swerved slightly, to either side, he would have plowed into a living mass. But he didn't.

Few of Rookies Held Likely To Stick

Only 15 Given Chance; Buddy Lewis Hailed as Good Prospect.

CHICAGO, April 7 (AP).—Of the many called, few American League rookies have been chosen to stick.

A checkup with Henry P. Edwards, manager of the league's service bureau, showed not more than 15 of the 96 more or less promising athletes whose hopes were lifted by chances to make good in major league baseball this year, received anything like definite stamps of approval. The list may expand or dwindle as the pilots change their minds between now and May 15 when the rosters must be trimmed to 23 men.

Starting with the World Champion Detroit Tigers, only two newcomers appeared certain to last—and the duo did not include First Baseman Rudy York. York, named with Joe Di Maggio, of the New York Yankees, by President Will Harridge, of the junior circuit, as the league's hottest rookies, was farmed out after Hank Greenberg belatedly signed.

Wade Has Chance.

Rookie Chase Praised By Harris

Nats' Pilot Impressed by Native Speed of Young Pitcher.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

WASHINGTON'S first pre-view of the team that will carry its banner in the 1936 American League pennant race will be afforded the city today when the travel-weary Nats meet up with the Brooklyn Dodgers in an exhibition game at Griffith Stadium.

Home again after flitting from the paths of Dixie's tornadoes and floods, the Nats displayed a fine contempt for mere rain yesterday, holding a morning workout at Griffith Stadium that produced a burst of unbounded elation by Manager Bucky Harris.

Young Kendall Chase, the step-child of the pitching staff until he held Louisville to six hits over the nine-inning route a week ago, was the object of Harris' joy. The Nats' manager went far out on the limb in praise of the reformed sandlotter after the workout yesterday.

Harris to Use Him in Game.

"I don't know where he gets it," said Harris, "but this fellow Chase throws one of the fastest balls in the league. And he shows signs of being able to get the ball over the plate. I want to see more of him, and I'm almost holding my breath until he goes to work against a big league club.

"He's going to get a chance to start a game during this exhibition series and if he's the kind of a pitcher he appears to be, we're the luckiest team in the world to pick up a kid like him. He's fast, I tell you, and he can end all my pitching worries if he develops an ounce of control."

With the opening game in view, Harris is dividing his pitching assignments among the hurlers he will rely upon as starters in the first month of the campaign. Thus Buck Newsom and Earl Whitehill, the No. 1 and No. 2 pitchers on the staff, will share the hurling today against the Dodgers.

Tom Zachary to Pitch Today.

Newsom has permitted only one run in the 23 innings he has pitched in exhibition games—all against big league opposition—and Whitehill in his last start shut out the Reds in the five innings he worked.

Against the Nats, Manager Casey Stengel of the Dodgers is expected to send an old Washington favorite to the mound. Tom Zachary, member of Washington's pennant-winning teams of 1924 and 1925, continues to be a highly valuable hurler with the Dodgers and has expressed a desire to pitch today.

The line-up that Harris will present to Washington fans for their first glimpse of his 1936 team will see Cliff Bolton behind the bat, Joe Kuhel at first, Buddy Myer at second, Cecil Travis at shortstop, Buddy Lewis at third base and Jesse Hill, Jake Powell and Johnny Stone in the outfield.

In deference to Washington fans who remember his exploits of last year, and in deference also to the gate receipts, Manager Bucky Harris plans to supplant Lewis at third with Senor Roberto Estalella in the late innings of the game.

Refiner Five Beats Universals, 55 to 43

By Dave Herman.

GLOBE REFINERS, of McPherson, Kans., national A. A. U. champions, gained revenge for their defeat in the Olympic tryouts at the hands of Universal Pictures, of Hollywood, last night at Tech High's gym by trouncing the Californians, 54-43, before more than 1,600 spectators.

It was the "rubber" game of a series born a few weeks ago in the National A. A. U. finals in Denver, and the giant Jayhawks left no doubt as to their supremacy.

A number of Kansas and California notables were in the stands, including Representative John M. Costello, of Hollywood, who welcomed the teams in behalf of the Nation's Capital.

Frank Lubin, huge Universal center, ran away with the high point honors, rolling up 17 points, 14 the result of field goals. Lubin stuck to Joe Fortenberry, McPherson's 6-foot-8 all-American center, like adhesive tape, and the Kansan could tally but one field goal.

Lubin and Fortenberry waged quite a battle of fouls. Late in the second half Fortenberry was banished on account of personals, and a few minutes before the whistle blew Lubin committed his fourth personal, but was permitted to remain in the game since Carl Knowles, of Universal, already had left the game for overzealous guarding.

Most of the cheers went to the scarlet-clad Kansas warriors, especially Charlie Bailey, McPherson guard, who had a hot hand last night, scoring five field goals from mid-court. Bailey rang up 12 points, and his teammate Willard Schmidt, 6-foot 9-inch center-forward, tallied 13. Francis Johnson, of McPherson, scored 12.

McPherson rolled into an early 7-to-0 lead before Universal got busy. Then the Picture boys stepped ahead at 17-to-7. The Kansans, led by Schmidt and Bailey knotted the count at 19-all at half time.

In the closing session it was all McPherson, as Schmidt, Johnson, and Wheatley pocketed goals to run the score to 34-21, the Oilers' favor.

Carl Knowles, all-American forward, and Sammy Balter, forward, put on some fancy passing and shooting in the first half, but their attack bogged down in the final period.

Two of the Universal players, Lloyd Goldstein and Dwane Swanson injured in the garden the other night, were on the sidelines.

The slippery floor showed up the passing and shooting of both teams.

Ring Offer Dangled Before Baer

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Promoter Mike Jacobs of the 20th Century Club tonight opened negotiations to entice Madcap Maxie Baer back to the ring and to launch the former heavyweight champion on the comeback trail in Europe.

"Uncle" Mike's negotiations are important and significant, coming as they do on the eve of Jeff Dickson's arrival from Paris. Dickson is Europe's outstanding sports promoter.

In a long-distance conversation with Baer's spokesman in California, Mike offered Maxie a handsome guarantee if the Livermore larruper would tie up with Mike and Dickson for a series of fights in Europe and later in the United States.

Jacobs' offer also included bouts for Brother Buddy Baer, the first of which would be one of the preliminaries to the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling brawl at Yankee Stadium in June.

Baer's decision is expected to be announced tomorrow. If Mike's offer is accepted, the two Baers and their spokesman will fly to New York immediately to sign contracts, Jacobs said.

"I'm doing everything in my power to get Maxie back into the ring," Jacobs said. "In spite of Maxie's comparatively poor showing against Jim Braddock and Louis, I still consider him the second best drawing card in the boxing game. He ranks next to Louis.

"Baer is only 27 years old. And, regardless of what people say or think, I don't believe a man of his physique, strength and punch can be burned out at that age. If Schmeling could come back, why can't Baer? Besides, that beating Louis gave him last September probably taught Maxie a lesson. Maybe he'll take care of himself and get in top shape. If he'll do that I'm sure he can come back strong."

Balkanese, at 7-1, Captures Feature on Heavy Track at Bowie

Form Players Score in 5 Events

Hiatus, Acautaw, Royal Wager All Come Through.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

BOWIE RACE TRACK, Md., April 7.—Running over a track as holding and sticky as fly paper, Balkanese turned on enough speed in the stretch to win the Salisbury purse, the day's feature race at this Prince Georges County turf plant. With Jockey Westrope swinging a convincing whip, Balkanese came from far back in the field to earn a head decision over Tall Oak, the favorite from the barn of Mrs. John Hay Whitney. Third money was garnered by the Vanderbilt Stable's Irrepressible.

Balkanese was rather shunned in the principal wagering and returned a mutuel of $15.30 for the usual $2 investment.

A fog that hung over the track lifted shortly before post time, and a warm sun broke through the clouds, leaving perfect racing weather everywhere except on the track. There the horses were running in a mucky strip that the chart makers termed "heavy."

Daily Double Stock Falls.

The usual week-day crowd of some 5,000 turned out for the none too alluring program headed by the dash of the juveniles. Daily double stock fell off considerably with the combination of Hiatus and Royal Wager returning a "mere" $31.10 to those seeking a fortune.

The Vanderbilt forces sent the favorite players away winging when Hiatus took the opening race from a cheap field competing over the six furlong course. Shuffled back soon after the break, Hiatus was zigzagged through the stretch while avoiding horses to come out in the clear with a two-length victory. Otofus, the early pace setter, swung wide entering the stretch, but came again to be second, ahead of Sylvia G. The winner paid a $3.90 mutuel.

The second odds-on choice of the day scored in the second race. Acautaw, with the mud he loves under his hooves, scampered to the wire ahead of Play Book and First Pigeon. Always within striking distance, Acautaw responded when he put to a drive and was drawing out at the end. The son of Trojan paid a $3.60 mutuel.

Royal Gold defeated Timepiece and Quiet Please in the sixth race to pay a $7.30 mutuel. Owned by A. Coucci and ridden by his brother, S. Coucci, he fought it out through the stretch with Timepiece to draw out nearing the wire.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIATUS, $3.90, $2.70, $2.50; LOTOFUS, $3.90, $3.10; SYLVIA G., $7.30.

HIATUS, away nicely but outrun for the first half-mile, was kept on the outside until moving up at the stretch turn, secured racing room between the leaders when straightened into the home stretch, closed fast and was going away under pressure after taking the lead in the final furlong. LOTOFUS stalled off early contention from MISS TWINKLE, lost ground entering the home stretch, but held on stronger than usual in closing drive. SYLVIA G. saved a lot of ground to move into the lead at the turn for home, but failed to rally in the closing drive. MISS TWINKLE was prominent all the way and had no mishaps. CORUM went very wide after being slow to get into full stride. He closed a good gap and was racing strong at the end. BE JUST raced forwardly but was not good enough. CABLEGRAM was outrun. PEACE MOVE broke very slow and was never a factor. CHIEF HOLLIS stopped to a walk in the last five-sixteenths.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:08. Winner, Mrs. A. P. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ACAUTAW (entry), $3.60, $2.60, $2.40; PLAY BOOK, $8.80, $5.60; FIRST PIGEON, $7.10.

ACAUTAW, at home in the footing and a strong factor in the early running, was forced wide into the homestretch, wore PLAY BOOK down when straightened away and came out slowly under stout urging. PLAY BOOK displayed good speed while setting the pace, was taken into the firmer footing when reaching the homestretch and held on well when forced to a severe drive. FIRST PIGEON was sent up fast on the outside when leaving the backstretch and closed with good energy in the closing drive. LITTLE ARGO was hard ridden for the entire trip, but could not engage the leaders.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward (divided). Start good from stall gates in chute. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:41. Winner, Mrs. J. V. Stewart's ch. g. (4), by Prince of Wales—Bet. Trained by J. V. Stewart. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 1:16.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL WAGER, $5.90, $3.50, $3.50; BLUE ALICE, $3.60, $2.90; LADDIE STONE, $7.00.

ROYAL WAGER took command without effort after going a furlong, was kept in the best footing while setting a steady pace, drew clear when ready and had speed in reserve at the end. BLUE ALICE, outmoved for the first half-mile, swung to the outside when rallying to punishment but could not threaten the winner. LADDIE STONE was under stout urging while forcing the pace, saved ground, but weakened during the stretch run. ENGLE'S BOY was vigorously ridden to hold a forward position, responded when put to a stout drive, but was not good enough. DARLING PAT showed speed in the first half-mile, then weakened. RE-ELECTION broke slowly and was never a factor. WIZARDESS went evenly. BLUE PRINCE and BLACK SWEEP were outrun.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward (division of third race). Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:07. Off at 4:08½. Winner, Calumet Farm's b. g. (3), by Toro—Evensong. Trained by F. J. Kearns. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49, 1:15 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EL CONTENTO, $9.50, $4.50, $2.70; HATS OFF, $6.50, $3.20. BOGERTIN, $4.10.

EL CONTENTO moved to the front directly after the start, was steered into the better footing after getting clear, rallied strongly when challenged in the last quarter-mile and, withstanding a tedious drive willingly, barely lasted long enough to stall off HATS OFF. Latter gained fast after being rated for the first three furlongs, came to the outside of the winner to draw on almost even terms in the closing furlong, then fought it out stoutly until the close. BOGERTIN improved his position steadily when settled in his best stride, but could not reach the first two.

FIFTH RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. The Salisbury. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:44. Winner, T. B. Martin's blk. c. (2), by Balko—French Doll. Trained by W. Burrows. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BALKANESE, $15.30, $6.00, $4.60; TALL OAK, $3.20, $2.60; IRREPRESSIBLE, $3.90.

BALKANESE, hustled hard to hold a contending position, came strongly after coming to the outside entering the home stretch and closed stoutly, was up in the last 50 yards. TALL OAK was rushed around his company after breaking slower than usual, raced into a slight lead when reaching the homestretch, saved ground and held on determinedly under punishment. IRREPRESSIBLE broke fast and closed speed until overhauled, then weakened gradually thereafter. TALKED ABOUT was stoutly handled from the beginning, but failed to improve his position under punishment.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:13. Off at 5:15. Winner, A. Coucci's ch. h. (5), by Golden Guinea—Queen High. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25, 0:50 2-5, 1:17 2-5, 1:44, 1:51.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL GOLD, $7.30, $3.70, $2.60; TIMEPIECE, $7.60, $4.80; QUIET PLEASE, $3.60.

ROYAL GOLD displaced QUIET PLEASE when straightened into the backstretch, was steadied along until challenged, rallied to punishment when reaching the home-stretch and outstayed TIMEPIECE under a strong drive. TIMEPIECE went around his field to enter contention midway of the final turn, drew on almost even terms with the winner in the closing sixteenth, but stumbled approaching the finish, only for which he may have been the winner. QUIET PLEASE, a keen factor after being displaced from the lead, held on willingly for the closing test. ONE CHANCE was hard urged throughout, but could not engage the leaders. MAD PRUMP was unable to menace at any stage. NAVAL CADET weakened in the last quarter-mile after going prominently for the first seven furlongs.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:41. Off at 5:43. Winner, A. M. Chichester's b. m. (6), by Black Servant—Golden Billows. Trained by W. M. Hunt. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:50 3-5, 1:17 3-5, 1:44 3-5, 1:58 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BILLOWY WAVE, $8.60, $4.20, $3.00; HAPPY FLAG, $15.30, $7.00; ROSS, $4.00.

BILLOWY WAVE, close to the early pacemakers from the start, secured racing room on the inside entering the stretch, took command without difficulty, drew clear and was not threatened thereafter. HAPPY FLAG, slow to find his speed, gradually improved his position and closed stoutly, but was no match for the winner. ROSS lacked early speed, but finished with good speed through the last quarter. VENETIAN, slow as usual in the early stages, closed a good end. LONE HAND, well up early, showed a burst of speed to get to the front but quit. CANIMAR had no excuses.

Bowie Race Track, Md., April 7, 1936.

Dear Al:

Just when I was thinking of looking in the dictionary to see if I could pick the word "winner," Old Acautaw, paying a few cigarette coupons, came through to break the jinx. Acautaw, by the way, was the first winner ever picked by Bennings and Company when the column began four years ago. Royal Gold made it two for us in the sixth race and I began feeling a little more kindly toward Clocker Mike. Perhaps, I'm getting somewhat high hat from being in Florida and California but it seems a shame that the Maryland tracks force the customers to put up with the old-fashioned odds board betting system. The mutuel department does its best but the "tote" would come through with a perfect performance. Then again, with the mechanical wagering device, betting could continue until the horses broke. 3 Local High School Teams Face Tough Diamond Foes Today

Eastern Nine Plays Devitt In Opener

None of D. C. Trio Are Favored to Win Engagements.

By John R. Vosburgh.

HIGH school baseball enjoys a busy early-season session today. Eastern's interhigh champions have picked the date to open their 1936 campaign, and both Central and Western are to be out gunning against worthy opposition.

None of the three schools have selected set-ups for their baptismal or near-baptismal frays. Central and Western having opened their seasons last week. Eastern has a highly rated Devitt Prep battalion as its debut opponent at Eastern; Central meets Loyola of Baltimore in Central Stadium, and Western must entertain the ever-formidable Washington-Lee High of Ballston, Va.

The net result finds none of the Washington high schools favored to win. Led by the great Adam Zinkievich, Devitt has a crew of ball players who rate well along with its football talent as exceptional athletic material. In fact, Devitt has had a couple of practice games with Georgetown Prep, which beat Western, Friday, and, from all reports from Garrett Park, has a geat schoolboy ball team.

What Coach Charlie Guyon is going to do about it is only problematical. Lefty Joe Sullivan, his great pitcher of last year, is no longer available and the chief must select his starting hurler from a list of rookies of Wade Pembroke, Lefty Stockwell, Ignatius DeShard and Chick Hollidge.

The latter is scarcely recovered from the recent basketball season, and to all intents and purposes Pembroke will be the starting pitcher. The youngster was named as the outstanding pitcher in the Police Boys Club League, which picked him as potential big-league material.

Wes Taylor is leading the race for the catching job for which Chick DiGiulian and Steve Kocack, a couple of other newcomers, are also competing. Gordon Bartoo is back at first and Al Kidwell, Al Pepper and Ralph Clinton back in the infield. Larry Sullivan, Maurice Lamb and Obie O'Brien are among the leading rookies battling for the outfield assignments.

Western, which dropped a 2-to-1 decision to Georgetown Prep Friday, after swamping National Training School Wednesday, 17 to 1, will start with young Lee Kushman, a southpaw, in the box. Coach Cliff Moore is not exactly perturbed about the Friday defeat in view of the sensational pitching of DeSales Powell, of Georgetown Prep, and is more or less anticipating a second victory for the Georgetowners.

Detton Newest Of Wrestling Sensations

EVERY now and then the wrestling industry, like Vesuvius, suffers an upheaval for a particular reason. It is well-known that Vesuvius erupts only to get her name in the paper. So it is, we fear, with the rassle racket, whose present eruption is named Dangerous Dean Detton.

Dangerous Dean, who works the feature with Emil Dusek tomorrow night at the Turner Arena, is billed as the "sensation of the age," "the greatest since" (insert name of favorite rassler), "the boy wonder" and various other pretentious names, which might lend increased activity to the turnstiles.

If one is to judge by past performances, there might be something in what the wrestling industry's barkers are saying. Detton just recently disposed of two former world champions—Jim Browning and Strangler Lewis—among others to win the Eastern International tournament in Philadelphia. Detton, who likes to be known as the Mormon Flash because he comes from Salt Lake City, first made his presence felt by battling his way to the finals of last summer's Pacific Coast tournament. After decisively trouncing 9 outstanding ear scramblers, he was forced to default to Vincent Lopez in the titular match because of a leg injury.

Sharkey Wins Golf Title From Meyer

Shooting exactly par for 14 holes, Buddy Sharkey, of Gonzaga, defeated Dick Meyer, of St. John's, 5 and 4, yesterday over the Garrett Park course, to win the Georgetown Prep invitation golf championship.

Team honors went to Gonzaga with 25 points. St. John's piled up 13 points for runner-up position, while St. Alban's and Georgetown Prep scored 7 and 6 points, respectively.

Smith Takes Western High Swim Pentathlon

Donald Smith, although placing first in only one event—the 160-yard medley, won the third annual Western High swimming pentathlon yesterday in the Central Y. M. C. A. pool. The versatile freshman scored 26½ points to beat out Capt. Ed Murphy by ½ point.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

THOSE 20-to-1 odds which Mr. Jack Doyle, of Broadway, is currently posting against the Nats in the 1936 pennant race are beginning to intrigue this department. Twenty to 1 are powerful odds in baseball and in my kindlier moments toward the Washington club I feel as if I'd like to get a little of that, as the saying goes.

POVICH.

Mister Doyle's quotations stand as the greatest insult yet to be flung at Bucky Harris' Washington pitching staff. Apparently, it is strictly on pitching that Mr. Doyle is condemning the Nats. The club for two years now has been one-two in team batting and defensively it has been around the top for nigh onto 15 years. But Bucky Harris' pitching is sufficient, or insufficient, as the case may be, to permit Mr. Doyle to flaunt those 20-to-1 odds in the faces of Washington fans or any others who might like to make a bet.

There were times in the South this spring when the Nats looked unbeatable. In fact, every time they were blessed with even half-decent pitching they were unbeatable. And there will be times this season, whenever Buck Newsom, Ed Linke or Earl Whitehill are in the box, that the Nats will be no worse than an even-money bet no matter what the opposition. With any kind of a fair shake in the pitching, the Nats are no 20-to-1 shot, notwithstanding Mr. Doyle's inventory of the situation.

Certainly there appears to be something screwy in the relation between the 20 to 1 on the Nats and the 8 to 5 on the Tigers, the 2 to 1 on the Red Sox, the 3 to 1 on the Indians and the 4 to 1 on the Yankees that Mr. Doyle is offering. Anybody who would suggest that the Yankees are a 5-to-1 better ball team than the Nats, as Doyle's odds make 'em appear, would be laughed out of the league, yet those are the odds obtainable.

MR. DOYLE is guided also, no doubt, by vivid memories of Washington clubs of the past two years to which the Nats now bear no more resemblance than I do to Clark Gable. There is even reason for belief that the pitching is better despite no tangible evidence as yet. Buck Newsom, who could be the best pitcher in this league, is an asset not possessed by the Nats until late in May last season, and who was then lost to the team for six weeks with a broken leg; Ed Linke, it seems, capped last year's dismal campaign with eight straight victories at a time when all hitters were in a frenzy to boost their batting figures with 1936 contracts in view; Earl Whitehill, a severe handicap to the club throughout the early months of 1935, is actually in the best condition of late years.

It still behooves Bucky Harris to dig up a fourth starting pitcher from among Jimmy DeShong, Jack Russell, Pete Appleton, Kendall Chase and Joe Bokina, but the development of any one of 'em would make those 20-to-1 odds of Doyle's look as silly as a Communist trying to get into Hitler's cabinet.

For some reason, Mr. Doyle apparently refuses to believe that Washington is a vastly improved ball club in all other respects. The speed which Harris' 1936 team possesses is no myth. The two new faces on the club, Jesse Hill and Buddy Lewis, bring to the team a pair of speedsters who may be unmatched by any other league entry. With Jake Powell, Buddy Myer, Joe Kuhel, Johnny Stone and Cecil Travis also in there hot-footing it, the sluggish Nats of 1935 are no more.

I am still wondering at those odds that Doyle is offering. You can get 20 to 1 against the Nats and only 4 to 1 against the Yankees, but any time the two clubs take the field against each other, the Nats will never be more than a 2-to-1 shot. It looks screwy, but Mr. Doyle didn't build his Broadway billiard establishment and his comfortable New York home by giving the suckers an even break.

In Short——

Doyle's book on the American League race balances 126 to 100, or 26 points in his favor . . . he has a 19-point edge in his National League book . . . Doyle announces that his most recent odds are the final pre-race odds, but any sizable bet on any club would cause a hasty revision by the Broadway bookie . . . Clyde Milan, manager of the Nats in 1922, declares that he knew Ossie Bluege was a ball player the first time he ever saw him . . . he met Bluege on the train en route to the Nats' training camp and Bluege was carrying a pair of his favorite bats with him, thus tipping off Milan . . . Bucky Harris, Earl Whitehill, Ossie Bluege and Buddy Myer yesterday were proudly exhibiting engraved silver lifetime passes to all big league games . . . they were presented by the American League to all of the league's ten-year men for "meritorious service." . . . some time this week, Clark Griffith will journey to the White House to present President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt with gold-engraved passes and officially invite 'em to the opening game on Tuesday.

man from North Carolina, gave Manny Wibble, former South Atlantic amateur lightweight champion, a fine going over to take a unanimous decision in a spectacular 6-round preliminary.

Dean made Wibble wobble numerous times as he bounded about the ring in whoopla fashion, flinging a constant barrage of lefts and rights to the head. In the third, Johnny dropped Manny for a 2-count, but was unable to mow him down again.

Husslein Savoy, an Egyptian lightweight, scored a second-round technical knockout over Harry Thompson, of Washington, in an interesting preliminary scheduled for 4 rounds. After fiddling about through the first round, Savoy shot a left and right cross to Thompson's jaw early in the round, fracturing the local lad's jaw and forcing Referee Denny Hughes to call a halt after 1 minute and 15 seconds.

lips, right-handed pitcher, and Infielder Gilbert English. The latter might be ousted by Third Baseman Don Ross, and outfielder Jake Wade still has a chance.

Di Maggio, hailed as the greatest young outfielder to appear on the scene in many seasons, was a definite unit in Joe McCarthy's plans. Steve Sundra, a hurler, and Catcher Wilard Herschberger also were prospects to eat a lot of meals at the expense of Col. Jacob Ruppert.

Steve O'Neill, Cleveland's new field general, hoped to hang onto Dennis Galehouse and Al Milnar, pitchers; Outfielder James Gleeson and Catcher Bobby Garbark, at least for a while. Mike Kreevich, the number 1 candidate to replace Al Simmons in centerfield for the Chicago White Sox, was Jimmy Dykes' choicest recruit.

The gold plated Boston Red Sox, loaded by purchase and trade with proved talent, probably will keep George Dickey, catcher and brother of Bill Dickey, the Yankee's great receiver. Three pitchers, Manuel Salvo, James Francis Henry and Stewart Bowers, were battling to determine which one sticks.

Kathryn Hemphill, Deborah Verry Tie

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., April 7.—Deborah Verry, Worcester, Mass., girl who last week captured the mid-South crown, and Kathryn Hemphill, up and coming young golfer from Columbia, S. C., each shot an 81 to tie for the qualifying medal today in the annual North and South Women's Golf Tournament.

One stroke behind was the husky defending champion, Estelle Lawson, of Chapel Hill, who had a 41-41—82. Just behind her came Betty Abernathy, of Pittsburgh, the Pennsylvania champion, with an 83.

W. Maryland Meets G. U. Nine Here

WHILE Maryland's traveling Terrapins are plodding into Virginia for a four-game series with Southern Conference opponents that will determine the scope of their influence in Dixie baseball this season, Georgetown's 1936 diamond machine will be introduced to the public this afternoon in a game with Western Maryland scheduled for 3 o'clock at the Hilltop.

This 1932 machine is hopefully regarded as the most powerful nine to sport the Blue and Gray in a decade, and possibly the equal of the famous 1922 combination that catapulted to the Eastern intercollegiate championship. It has balance afield and dynamite in its bats, but, alas, only one pitcher of proven ability. He is Nick Nicketakus, a portly and potent southpaw who will twirl the inaugural.

Delaney Fights Massera Here On Monday

AL DELANEY, leading local heavyweight box-office attraction, will return to the wars here Monday night in an eight-round bout at Turner Arena against Charley Massera, of Pittsburgh, until recently regarded as the best uncrowned heavy in the business.

On a comeback drive under the management of Jimmy Kelly, one of the best known figures in the fight game, Massera boasts victories over such campaigners as Maxie Rosenbloom, Abe Feldman, Al Ettore, Unknown Winston, Hans Berkie and Steve Dudas, among others. Massera has fought a draw with Bob Olin and Steve Hamas.

Fred McLeod, After 30 Years, Becomes an American Citizen

FRED McLEOD, Columbia Country Club golf professional, became an American citizen yesterday.

The transplanted Scot, who migrated to this country from North Berwick some 30 years ago, was naturalized in the District of Columbia Supreme Court by Justice Jesse C. Adkins.

His witnesses were Frederick N. Powers, well known Columbia golfer, and Cy McDonald, of Spalings. Col. E. W. Starling, head of the White House Secret Service, was to have been a witness, but he was detained in the South, and unable to come here in time to appear in court.

McLeod, 53 years old, came to Columbia from St. Louis 24 years ago.

In 1908 at the Myopia Hunt Club McLeod won the National Open championship—his only national victory. He has been on the threshhold of at least six other National Open championships.

Until the Sarazens, the Hagens, the Smiths, the Runyans, Revoltas and the Lafoons pushed him out of the spotlight in the last 10 years, McLeod was recognized as one of the world's leading professionals.

Before he turned his attentions to professional golf, McLeod was a mail carrier in his native heath, North Berwick. Harry Vardon, Ted Ray and Abe Mitchell, the English greats, Jones, Hagen and Sarazen, are among some of his most cherished golfing friends.

Grant Defeats Allison to Win Net Title

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Texas, April 7.—Bryan "Bitsy" Grant, fighting to convince Capt. Wilmer Allison, of the American Davis Cup team, that he deserves the No. 1 singles spot on the squad, defeated Allison here this afternoon to win the River Oaks Tennis Tournament championship.

Playing brilliantly, Atlanta's mighty mite gained a 6—1, 4—6, 6—4, 6—0 decision over Allison, the National champion.

Grant thus became the first player to win the River Oaks tournament twice in succession. His victory was almost a repetition of his last year's conquest, when he defeated Allison in the finals.

Allison was in top form in the second and third sets, but his best was not good enough. Four times in the final game of the third set Allison needed only one point to win the game, but the Georgian would not yield and finally took the set when Allison double faulted.

Deans Turn Modest, Set No Goal

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Texas, April 7.—There will be no pitching goal for the Dean brothers this season.

"Me and Paul" have gone modest. The St. Louis Cardinal aces apparently are going to pitch first and talk afterward this year. It's new strategy for them—particularly for big brother "Dizzy."

Jerome Herman and Paul came to town today, quietly and unheralded.

They politely declined to predict how many games the St. Louis Cardinals already have in the bag because of their pitching and actually shied away from hotel lobby baseball talk.

"I ain't making any predictions this year," grinned "Dizzy," standout holdout until a few weeks ago.

Paul "left it up to Diz to do all the predictin'."

Warburg Urges Less Control By Government

Banker Says President Has Veered From Original Platform.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, April 7.—James P. Warburg, New York banker and New Deal critic, today made a plea for "the elimination of all those things which do not properly belong in the sphere of Government action."

In an address before the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, Warburg urged this, "either because they exceed the powers given to our Federal Government under the Constitution, or because they are objectives which no government can reasonably hope to attain."

In defining "the problem of the opposition," Warburg also advocated "the development of principles and policies to aid us in gradually attaining those objectives which properly lie within the sphere of Government action."

"Car Has Stopped."

"One does not under those circumstances get out the Automobile Blue Book in order to point out to the driver where he took he wrong turning some miles back and which is the road he should have taken. At this moment, however, it would appear that there are plenty of people yelling warnings and waving flags. The car has not changed its direction, but it has stopped for the moment."

Turning to review the "extremely critical situation" which prevailed when President Roosevelt took office, Warburg said, "no one will deny that Mr. Roosevelt showed courage.

"Few would claim—and I am not one of the few—that they would have acted more wisely under the same circumstances. But that is not the point here. It was after the most critical moments were over that Mr. Roosevelt began to veer away from the principles for which he had stood and upon which he had been elected."

The proceeds of this offering will be used for working capital and general corporate purposes.

The company was organized in June, 1935, under the direction of F. R. Henderson, its president. Mr. Henderson was formerly president of the Rubber Exchange of New York, and member of the board of governors of the Silk Exchange, Hide Exchange and Metal Exchange of New York. Bankers Offer 330,614 Shares Of Flintkote

Royal Dutch Interests Are Relinquishing Control.

An offering of 330,614 shares of the Flintkote Co., of which 281,914 shares are being offered initially by prospectus, is being made today by a group of investment banking houses headed by Lehman Brothers.

The shares are priced at $47.25 per share.

The Flintkote Co. has registered securities in accordance with a previously announced plan of the Royal Dutch interests to divest themselves of control in the company. The registration does not constitute new financing by the company, which will receive no proceeds from the transaction.

The plan contemplates the conversion of 330,614 shares of no par value class B common stock held by the Shell Union Oil Corporation and the N. V. de Bataafsche Petroleum Maatschappij into a similar number of class A shares, in accordance with the provisions of the class B stock. The 330,614 shares of no par value common stock then held by Shell Union and Bataafsche would then be sold to a group of underwriters at $45 a share.

Associated with Lehman Brothers in the public offering are: Hallgarten & Co., White, Weld & Co., Dominick & Dominick, Charles D. Barney & Co., Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., Shields & Co., Hemphill, Noyes & Co., Cassatt & Co., Inc., and Laurence M. Marks & Co.

Court Hears Objections To Amoskeag Plans

Boston, April 7 (AP).—A Federal judge withheld final approval of reorganization of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Co. today, pending his consideration of petitions objecting to the plan, including one from Frederick H. Prince, Boston capitalist.

Judge George C. Sweeney heard Edward R. Hale, representing Prince, question the constitutionality of section 77-B of the Federal bankruptcy act under which the company sought to reorganize. Hale was counsel for the Hoosac Mills, which fought the AAA and in whose case the United States Supreme Court held the AAA unconstitutional.

Am. Power & Light Net Income Gains

New York, April 7 (AP).—American Power & Light Co. and subsidiaries, one of the principal holding organizations of Electric Bond & Share system, operating in 1,213 communities in 13 Southern and Western States, today reported 1935 net income of $7,512,476, equal to $4.24 a share on the combined $6 and $5 preferred stocks.

This compared with $3,959,929, or $2.23 a share on the combined preferred in 1934.

Water Works Calls Remaining 5% Bonds

New York, April 7 (AP).—Hobart Porter, president of American Water Works & Electric Co., today announced the company would redeem on June 15 at 102 and interest the remaining $2,941,000 of its 5 per cent collateral trust bonds.

The company contemplates no new financing in connection with the redemption, he stated, having made arrangements to borrow any amount needed to redeem the bonds unconverted prior to the redemption date. The bonds are convertible into 33 1-3 shares of common stock for each $1,000 principal amount.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Move Gradually Lower in Less Active Trading as Sharpshooters Snipe Profits.

New York, April 7.—Bond prices were firm, from high to low grade, but profit taking brought on a condition of lassitude in the stock market. Prices for shares varied little from the first dealings to the close and the majority of changes were toward slightly lower levels. The turnover was smaller at 1,600,000 shares. May wheat closed an eighth of a cent higher, at 94⅜ cents a bushel.

In stocks the recent leaders—Steel and General Motors—were lower on profit taking, but the steel group was much broader. The copper group again was active. Kennecott reached a new high price on the first sale, but could not hold. Rails were mostly 1 to 2 points lower.

Moderate gains were the rule for the public utilities. Half a dozen issues made up about 10 per cent of the total turnover. Water Works was the most active. Silver shares were higher, United States Smelting leading by 3 points. Some interest was attracted to the amusement group. Paramount made a new low. Pathe rose to around the best price of the year. Universal Pictures 8 per cent extended its advance since the close of last week to more than 20 points. Radio B shares rose nearly 2 points, and the common was firm.

Activity continued in Industrial Rayon. Curtiss-Wright was especially active and soft. Distillers-Seagrams and Greyhound were pressed steadily downward to new low prices.

Praising One's Child.

From a short term view the proposed tax on undistributed corporation income is rather favorable than otherwise. Passage of the act might well bring on selling by large holders seeking to escape the additional surtaxes on dividends, but the majority of stockholders are not in the surtax brackets anyhow. Speculation in stocks would be attracted by the apparent increase in earnings, because of elimination of the present corporation tax, and the prospect for larger dividend payments. That may account for the seeming apathy in Wall Street, with regard to the tax.

On longer view the tax appears to be thoroughly bad, and just as bad from the standpoint of Government revenue as from that of business stability. Meanwhile, in one section of the press a considerable display was given to the fact that Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury Department, testified before the House committee in favor of the bill. That, it was said, confounded the critics of the measure. To most people it would appear to be merely another case of overlooking the old newspaper maxim that when a dog bites a man, it is not news.

Sociology.

Attorney Oliphant is well known for his sociological views and activities and is generally believed to be the principal author of the new tax bill. That he should defend it is natural enough. He could do only three things: Defend his own measure, resign from the Treasury, or follow his chief on a holiday to distant places. The only surprise lurked in the fact that a Treasury official said anything at all. What the Treasury counsel said scarcely made the bill appear any better, but it did give the affair a "reform" touch, and also possibly made it clearer to Congressmen that big business, as such, will be taxed less. It is to be hoped that Congressmen will catch the other point, namely, that stockholders, supposed to pay the new taxes, are mainly people of small means who won't pay much tax at all, but that, denuded of surplus, the country's industrial organizations will fall easy victims to the next depression.

Foreign exchange markets indicated that the British control continued to sell sterling and buy francs, but apart from a slight sag in the pound and a further rise in francs no excitement could be found. Few people believe that the franc will be disturbed on gold, at least until after the French elections at the end of this month. What will happen then or later probably will depend on what the Government wishes to do rather than on what it may be forced to do at this time.

The stability of outside prices and the fall of French prices have made the task of maintaining the franc on gold easier. French commodity prices are now said to be much nearer parity with the rest of the world. Hoarding and some flight of French capital have taken place. The fight still is one of the large rentier class on the one hand against businessmen who think a devalued franc will help them, on the other.

Tax Day in Chicago.

The weekly figures of reporting member banks in 11 cities were badly distored by shifts of deposits and changes in ownership of Government securities in Chicago in connection with the Illinois moneyed capital tax. In anticipation of demands from customers for temporary holdings of Government securities to exempt their funds from the tax, Chicago banks annually lay by huge amounts of Treasury obligations for resale just before April 1. This year, in the week ended April 1, banks in the Chicago district resold $232,00,000 of Government securities and suffered a drop of no less than $316,000,000 in their demand deposits. Apparently those deposits which were not checked against to pay for temporary holdings of Govrenment securities were shifted to New York or to San Francisco over the tax date, for demand deposits rose $69,000,000 in New York and $52,000,000 in San Francisco.

Other Changes.

Had it not been for this big drop in portfolios of Government securities in Chicago the member banks would have had an increase, for the aggregate decrease for all the banks was only $217,000,000, including the $232,000,000 Chicago loss. The same holds true of demand deposits, which for all the reporting banks were down $169,000,000. An interesting sidelight in the weekly figures is the evidence that brokers loans are on the rise in Chicago and Boston as well as in New York. Securities other than Governmental increased $38,000,000 in the week, of which $26,000,000 was in the New York district. There was a $71,000,000 rise in miscellaneous, including commercial, loans of which $24,000,000 was in this district, the remainder being widely scattered.

$180,000,000 Land Bank 3s Offered Today

Refunding Issue, Priced at 99½, Will Yield About 3.03%.

A group of investment banking houses, headed by Alex Brown & Sons, of Baltimore, is offering today $180,000,000 10 to 20 year Federal Land Banks 3 per cent consolidated Federal farm loan bonds, dated May 1 this year and due May 1, 1956. The bonds are priced at 99½ per cent and interest, to yield about 3.03 per cent.

The proceeds of the sale, together with cash on hand, are to be used to retire approximately $185,205,300 of 4½ per cent bonds of the individual banks which have been called for payment May 1, 1936.

The offering is made on behalf of the 12 Federal Land Banks under the direction of Charles R. Dunn, their fiscal agent. Associated with Alex. Brown & Sons in the public offering are: The Chase National Bank, Brown, Harriman & Co., Inc., the National City Bank of New York, Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, Edwin B. Smith & Co., The First Boston Corporation and Lee Higginson Corporation.

Lehigh Valley Net Is Best Since 1930

New York, April 7 (AP).—E. E. Loomis, president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., in his annual pamphlet report to shareholders issued today said, "Substantial reductions in normal expenses in all departments made possible the best showing since the beginning of the business depression in 1930."

This, he said, was made in spite of "extraordinary items" such as higher pay rolls, higher material costs and flood losses.

"While gross revenues increased 2 per cent over 1934 and were the largest since 1931, increased costs of approximately $2,500,000 could not be avoided.

"Employe pay rolls were $1,409,000 greater because of the mandatory restoration of the remaining 7½ per cent of the 10 per cent wage reduction made on February 1, 1932.

"Higher prices for fuel and other materials, and flood losses amounted to more than $1,000,000," he said.

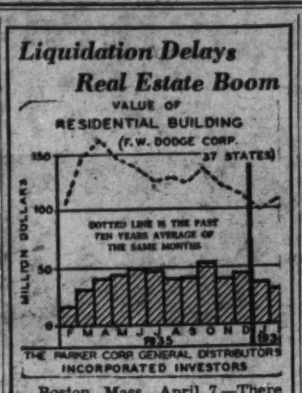
Liquidation Delays Real Estate Boom



Boston, Mass., April 7.—There is still some distress real estate on the market; also, banks continue to liquidate property which they were forced to take over. This situation, which is one cause holding back a building boom, is rapidly righting itself. The value of residential building in February was 82 per cent ahead of February, 1935, but below January, contrary to the seasonal trend.

The plan provides for the redemption of all the outstanding 7 per cent "A" preferred R. C. A. stock at $55 a share, plus accrued dividends.

The redemption is to be effected by means of cash in the company's treasury and a loan of $10,000,000 from banks at 2½ per cent a year. The bank loan is for five years and may be repaid at any time.

Trial dates for Dennis B. McDaniel, alias Jack Russell, and Woodrow Wilson McDaniel, who were indicted yesterday in connection with the holdup of the Ballston Bank, have not been set, it was said at the office of Sterling Hutcheson, United States district attorney.

Several cases involving charges of violations of the Internal Revenue laws have been set tentatively for this week. Among them are:

Alexandria Flier Hurt With D. C. Man in Crash

James Milland, 25, of Alexandria, Va., and A. E. Holland, Pathe Newsreel cameraman, of this city, were injured yesterday when their plane crashed in a muddy field near Simpsonville, 12 miles south of Greenville, S. C., according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Milland, pilot of the plane, was the most seriously hurt. He was taken to a hospital in Greenville. Holland was treated for an injury to his eye and discharged. The two men explained that a shortage of fuel forced them to land.

Townsend Plan Is Reorganized At Baltimore

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 7.—Directors of the Townsend plan reorganized the national movement here today and, at the same time, challenged the Congressional investigation of its affairs as being "unwarranted and unconstitutional."

At the end of an all-day session, the directors also issued a statement charging Robert Earl Clements, resigned national secretary, and George Highly, Los Angeles leader, with plotting to wrest control of the organization by threats.

The statement claimed that a detective in Los Angeles, named Don Wilke, was hired to frighten Walter Townsend—a brother of Dr. F. E. Townsend—from the organization in an attempt to gain control.

Townsend Denies He'll Resign.

Dr. Townsend again denied "rumors" that he planned to resign as national president and asserted he intended "to stay in the movement until it was successful."

In a statement of the reorganization, the directors announced that Baxter Rankine, of the Washington headquarters, was appointed treasurer, and Harrison Hiles, of Washington, business manager.

In the assault upon the Congressional probe, the directors instructed Sheridan Downey and Gomer Smith, vice presidents, to bring "such legal action as they deem necessary to bring the Congressional investigation to an end or to test the legal rights of the Townsend organization with reference to the same."

A resolution condemned the inquiry as "not carried on in good faith for legislative purposes, but conducted for the purpose of scandalizing individuals and attempting to discredit a movement by slandering some of the people in it."

Would Reveal "Facts."

The filing of a "complete statement in court" was said to be contemplated "so that the American public may know the facts concerning the investigation which have been concealed by the investigating committee and its attorney."

Purported testimony before the committee that Dr. Townsend collected $1,700 at a Los Angeles meeting which was not turned over to the national fund also was assailed.

As a parting shot at Congressional doings, the directors said they had just been informed that the Smith lobby registration bill had passed and assailed this measure as "aimed at all organizations promoting social and governmental reform in America" and saying "we will not submit to any such type of legislation."

Los Angeles Unit Resigns.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, April 7.—The largest club in the Townsend old-age pension movement, Los Angeles No. 93, severed its connections with the National organization today.

The club, claiming more than 22,000 members, affirmed its support of its president, George Highley, whose resignation or removal was demanded by national directors meeting in Baltimore.

Highly was accused of "disloyal conduct." He summoned the club to hear the charges and 1,800 members responded.

The club unanimously voted to disband, then reorganized without affiliation with the national organization.

$100,000 Estimated For School Repair

Estimates amounting to $100,000 or more are expected to be approved by the Commissioners today for remodeling the National Training School for Girls at Little Falls and Conduit roads.

Costs of all work which is necessary to put the school in good condition would total $128,000, according to estimates considered by the Commissioners yesterday. That figure was submitted by Col. Dan I. Sultan, engineer commissioner, on the basis of surveys made by his lieutenants.

Remodeling of the institution was asked by Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, superintendent, at a hearing before the Commissioners recently. The hearing was the result of visits to the school by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, member of both the District and the Senate District appropriations sub-committee. Both the Senators decried existing conditions at the school.

Give Clean-up Articles To Needy, Citizens Told

The Salvation Army yesterday appealed to residents of the District to make the annual spring clean-up week an occasion to donate old clothing, old household furniture no longer in use and other similar articles for distribution among the needy by the army.

The clean-up campaign has been fixed for this and next week by the Commissioners. The District refuse department is to clean alleys and streets this week. Next week householders are to rid their homes and premises of the winter accumulation of debris, which will be collected by the refuse department. Plea of the Salvation Army was indorsed by the Commissioners.
